Sedition Case Defendant Found Dead

New Rulings Promised on Draft Status Of Older Men

Clarification Is To Come Soon on Standing of Those Who Are Over 26

By Ben W. Gilbert

New draft regulations to clarify the future status of men over 26 will be issued shortly, a spokesman for national Selective Service headquarters said yesterday.

Meanwhile, those over 26 in essential activities—including Government employes—may not be inducted, except as volunteers, the official said. Asked to comment on reports that some draft boards were not following the regulations strictly and were inducting men over 26 employed in listed essential activities, he said:

"We would like such registrants to call their status to the attention of their draft boards. If not satisfied, they should appeal to the State Selective Service director, who will straighten the matter out."

Draft of Older Men Stayed

The induction of men over 26 in essential activities was stayed when the armed services discovered that they had received substantially more men than they had expected, enabling Selective Service to concentrate on the induction of younger men for combat replacements. Men over 26 who are not in essential activities (listed by the War Manpower Commission) are subject to induction at any time, but cannot be taken as long as men under 26 are available.

A spokesman for District Selective Service headquarters explained that the District was ordering men in the 26 to 30 age bracket to report for physical examinations, but is not inducting them. No work is being done on men over 30, it was said.

The District move was regarded as an important hint of the policy that Selective Service national headquarters will adopt for the future. Induction of men over 30 this year is regarded as unlikely, while men in the 26 to 30 age-bracket are expected to be called on mainly to make up for any shortage of men under 26.

Many Still Available

It was understood that figures gathered recently by Selective Service indicate that a substantial pool of men under 26 is still available—more than previously estimated.

The District official stated that local calls are being made up of men under 26 and volunteers over 26 for the present, but he declined to estimate how long this situation would continue.

The list of essential activities includes work for the Government, and for the present, all Government employes over 26 have been granted an indefinite stay of induction, although some draft boards have ordered Government employes to report for induction, possibly a result of a refusal to acknowledge that Government employment is essential.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, has summoned State directors to Washington for conferences Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday—presumably to discuss proposed new draft regulations with them.

Warworkers' Rush to Safer Jobs Feared

Patterson, Bard, Hershey Plead for Manpower Control

By Robert C. Albright

Army, Navy and Selective Service witnesses yesterday warned a Senate committee that unless effective manpower legislation is passed warworkers will stampede to more secure jobs as peace nears, jeopardizing the war effort in its knock-out stages.

"It will be like a fire in a movie house, with everyone trying to find the door first," Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told the Senate Military Committee. "We are without adequate controls to combat it."

Patterson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard, and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, joined in common front support of the Bailey-Brewster "work or fight" bill as their No. 1 preference if national service legislation fails of passage.

Provisions of Measure

The Senate bill, paralleling recent recommendations of the House Military Committee, would make every draft-deferred male 18 to 45 liable to induction for "special service," if he left an essential job without Selective Service approval, or if he failed to take such a job on assignment. Those inducted as a penalty would receive Army pay, but be denied veterans' benefits.

Each of the armed service spokesmen called first for national service legislation, but if there is no chance of that said they would favor the Bailey-Brewster bill.

Testimony of Witnesses

Informing the sparsely attended Senate hearing that orderly control over manpower is more essential than ever, the witnesses testified:

1. That job turnovers among 4-F's in war industries are increasing, ranging up to seven times the

FBI Arrests Ward Official In Chicago

Destruction of U. S. Poster, Illegal Firing Of Employes Charged

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Chicago, May 4.—Federal agents arrested an executive of Montgomery Ward & Co. today and charged the mail order firm with the destruction of Government property and the dismissal of employes without the knowledge or approval of Department of Commerce officials now running the plant.

Paul D. Sowell, 39-year-old assistant to the operating manager of Ward's, was taken into custody by FBI men and ultimately released on a $250 bond.

[The Associated Press reported that Sowell was handcuffed as he was taken from the marshal's office to the court of Commissioner Walker. Joseph Tobin, chief deputy marshal, said this was the usual procedure in handling prisoners in the custody of the marshal's office.—Editor's note.]

Sowell was charged with removing and destroying a poster placed in the Government-seized plant.

Other Similar Offenses Charged

John D. Goodloe, Government-appointed grievance officer, declared similar notices have been removed "repeatedly" and employes have been fired without the knowledge of Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor, "operating manager for the United States."

These acts, Goodloe asserted, have occurred since last Thursday night, when Federal Judge William H. Holly issued a temporary injunction restraining the company and its officers from interfering with the Government's operation of its Chicago plants.

Sowell's arrest came one week to the day after Sewell L. Avery, board chairman of Ward's, was bodily ejected from his executive offices by two soldiers for refusing

Food Drives To Be Given New Slogans

Some Officials Fear 'War-Is-Over' Ideas As Result of End Of Most Rationing

By Christine Sadler

Worried over the belief Americans will interpret point-free foods as a sign the war is over, Government agencies yesterday started shuffling various grow-and-save food campaigns to find new angles of presentation.

Food scarcity has furnished a main selling point in such programs as Victory Gardening, "Food Fights for Freedom" advertising, and Clean Plate clubs. Some officials expressed fear these and other campaigns needed in the war effort might suffer because most meats and vegetables no longer are rationed.

Other Government officials, however, declared the public probably would understand why the removal of foods from rationing does not mean food is no longer needed in the war effort. They pointed to OPA's recent survey to determine what effect the removal of lard from rationing had on the fat salvage campaign.

Housewives See Logic

OPA found housewives were continuing to save fat and that "99 out of 100" of them could see the logic in "plenty of food to eat, but none to waste."

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones cautioned in a statement on food that plenty now "does not necessarily mean we will have plenty later."

"Too many are prone to take a food supply for granted," he said, citing production difficulties confronting farmers during the coming crop season. With less labor to help them and "machinery wearing out," he declared, farmers will have a harder time meeting requirements this year than last. Also, he pointed out, spring plantings have been delayed considerably this year by too much rain.

Feed Supply Still Short

"Despite the greatly increased feed production and the imports of all the feed our transportation facilities would permit, there is still not enough feed to supply the number of livestock we now have," he said, declaring this will necessitate the marketing through the year of a greater number of cattle, hogs and poultry, and the culling of dairy herds and "getting rid of the old and less productive cows."

The food supply always is temporary, he pointed out, and must be constantly replenished. WFA is buying for war needs from 25 to 35 million pounds of pork each week, he said, and 40 per cent of the major cuts of beef is being set aside for our armed forces.

Abundance of Some Foods

"Today we have an abundance of eggs—more than are needed at this time. The same is true of potatoes and early cabbage. Just now there is no serious food shortage of any kind. We have an abundance of cattle, and just as soon as movement into processing plants is sufficient, everyone should be able to have a good supply of beef.

"Milk is not as plentiful as many other important food items. However, the consumption of fluid milk is at the highest level ever known in this country . . ." he declared.

Flying Forts Hit Air Base In Holland

1750 Bombers From Italy, Britain Rain 6000 Tons on Europe In Day, Night Raids

London, May 4 (AP).—American Flying Fortresses delivered a sharp attack on a Nazi airdrome in Holland today, highlighting the 20th straight day of the Allied aerial offensive—a day in which 1750 bombers striking from Britain and Italy by night and day dropped 6000 tons of explosives on Hitler's Europe.

American Marauders and Havoc light bombers and RAF Mitchells struck a wide variety of supply depots and military installations in northern France by daylight and American Mustangs conducted an offensive sweep over Brunswick, Germany.

All the Fortresses, about 250 in number, returned safely, as did the medium and light bombers. Their fighter escort lost three planes and downed nine Nazis, while the fighters over Germany shot down the only German plane sighted.

New Balkan Raid Indicated

The RAF sent out a fleet of 750 heavy bombers in a series of early-morning moonlight raids on France and Ludwigshaven, Germany, losing 49, and the Mediterranean air forces staged their first night attack on Bucharest, Rumania.

The Budapest radio went off the air with an air-raid warning late tonight, indicating that the Allied Air Forces based in Italy were returning to the Balkans for the second straight night.

Alarms of Allied planes also were sounded from the Balkans northward to the Alps and in western Germany. After the Budapest radio had fallen silent, the Berlin station announced, "several enemy bombers are over the Danube and the Alps area. Nuisance raiders are approaching western Germany." Then the Frankfurt radio likewise called out, "Enemy raiders are approaching."

While the over-all scope of the day's raids was light in comparison with recent mass assaults, the nature of the targets was notable. Having directed a long and shattering campaign against German factories, then against rail transport, the air forces now were centering their blows on German defensive installations and vital front supply dumps which the enemy will need instantly the moment invasion comes.

Tank Base Fiercely Defended

The opening of the western land front was being drawn perceptibly closer while the bulk of the heavy bomber forces rested from their prodigious labors in anticipation of new efforts to come.

The RAF moonlight strikes were directed at a major German military depot at Mailly, France; an airforce depot at Montdidier, an ammunition dump at Châteaudun and the chemical center of Ludwigshafen, Germany.

The attack at Mailly, a big shelter base for tanks and trucks, was hammered in against intense enemy fighter opposition.

"Another blow has been struck at German tank strength, recently much weakened by very heavy damage done to one of the largest producers of tank engines in Germany.

Invaders Hurled Back With Casualties Near Allied Base of Kohima

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, May 4 (AP).—Attacking Japanese troops have been thrown back with casualties both in Northern Burma and near the Allied base of Kohima, in India.

A brief communique today said there had been no important change in the fighting around Imphal, 60 miles south of Kohima, and for the first time in several days did not mention the Palel sector, where on Monday the Japanese were reported massing for an all-out attack on Imphal, 28 miles to the north.

(A Tokyo broadcast said the Japanese were "closing on Palel and steadily tightening their iron cordon around enemy forces entrenched in Imphal." It estimated the strength of British and Indian forces defending Imphal at nearly ten divisions. A Berlin claim made Wednesday that the Allies had

Foe Now Controls All But 60 Miles of Vital Peiping-Hankow Road

Chungking, May 4 (AP).—Japanese invaders of Honan Province have seized all but 60 miles of the Peiping-Hankow railway, the Chinese high command indicated tonight.

The enemy is driving down and up the rail route, where only a few weeks ago the Chinese had possession of a 175-mile stretch from Chenghsien south to Sinyang.

Advancing 23 miles northward from Singyang, one Japanese force has occupied Minkiang, and another swept on to attack Kioshan, 45 miles north, a communique said.

Japanese advancing southward are menacing Yencheng, 90 miles below Japanese-held Chenghsien, but the bulletin said this column had been stopped in bitter fighting.

The Japanese appeared to be taking special pains to protect themselves from flank attacks by branching out on both sides of the railway, especially to the west.

Allies Tighten Trade Noose Around Axis

Warn Neutrals' Firms Not to Aid Enemy In Survival Fight

By the Associated Press

The United States and Britain tightened their economic blockade of Germany yesterday with a warning to neutral European businesses not to assist the enemy in its final struggle for existence.

The warning was sounded in advance of the final Allied military drive to victory. It was based on a policy statement for 15,000 business concerns and individuals which have already been blacklisted because of their cooperation or trade with the Axis.

Under this iron-handed policy, sanctions against those firms will be maintained after the war for an indefinite time, thus giving concerns which have cooperated with the Allies an initial advantage in competing for postwar markets.

10,000 in Latin America

Ten thousand of the blacklist firms are in Latin America and it was indicated that sanctions against those would be eased first because Axis commercial intrigue has generally been brought under control in areas remote from the war zones.

The remaining 5000 firms are in European neutral countries. They face the possibility of prolonged sanctions, which include restrictions to prevent their doing business with British or American concerns. By a rough estimate, officials said, they represent a third or less of the firms still operating in that part of the world.

The remainder includes about 5000 companies and individuals which have cooperated with the Allies, and a somewhat larger group which has stayed more or less in the middle.

Directed at Middle Group

It is this latter group that the Allied economic warfare directors are seeking to reach, with their warning that if those firms play ball with the United Nations they need not fear economic sanctions after the war but that if they give assistance to the enemy they too will be blacklisted.

Francis H. Russell, chief of the State Department's division of world trade intelligence said in a speech to the American Drug Manufacturers Association at Hot

Nazi Massing Reported on 2 Italy Fronts

Rome Radio Says Allies Prepare For New Assaults

Allied headquarters, Naples, May 4 (AP).—The Germans were reported making large-scale movements today on the Adriatic and central sectors of the Italian Front. A minor Nazi attack was driven off by Indian troops of the Eighth Army on the East Coast Front.

The new enemy dispositions followed reports by the Nazi-controlled Rome radio that the Allies were making preparations on an unusual scale in apparent prelude to new assaults, and the prediction by the Naples newspaper Il Corriere that there was "feverish activity" in Italy for major operations.

Despite routine censorship restrictions, banning speculations on future operations, the newspaper also predicted new attacks would be made in Italy coincident with western invasion and renewed Russian offensives.

Allied bombers struck at the Marseille-Genoa rail line, main supply artery from France to Nazi armies in Italy, by bombing rail yards at Ventimiglia near the French border.

Headquarters disclosed U. S. and British fighters had destroyed 233 enemy planes, probably sent down 80 more, and damaged 164 others in defending the Anizo beachhead between January 22 and Apirl 22. Thirty-one Allied planes were lost.

Garner Found Dead in Bed; Inquest Held Unnecessary

Kansan Drawn Into Trial by Writings; Laughlin Fights Contempt Charges

Eighty-year-old Elmer J. Garner, one of the 30 alleged seditionists on trial in District Court, was found dead at 3 p. m. yesterday in his rooming house at 224 1st st. se.

Garner's body was found by another roomer in the house after the landlady, Mrs. Mabel Henry, noticed that the sedition trial defendant did not arise at his usual time. She enlisted the aid of S. L. Boarman, who climbed through a window and found the body in bed.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District coroner, was immediately called and after an examination of the body announced that an inquest would not be held in view of his belief that Garner's death was due to his advanced age.

His lawyer, Marvin F. Bischoff, said Garner while in court Wednesday appeared to "be in good spirits."

Garner, who came to Washington from Wichita, Kans., to stand trial with 29 other defendants in the biggest sedition case of World War II, told friends in the courtroom that he was related to former Vice President Jack Garner, who is now at his home in Uvalde, Tex. He was brought into the sedition case through articles he is alleged to have written for a publication known as Publicity, of which he was the editor.

Allied Sub Sinks Jap Warcraft, Ship Off Indo-China

New York, May 4 (AP). An Allied submarine operating off Indo-China athwart a Japanese supply route, sank a naval craft and a last week, the Japanese-controlled freighter in a double torpedoing Saigon radio said today.

The ships, sailing under the colors of the Japanese-dominated Vichy officials in Indo-China, were hit the night of April 29-30 "within the space of a few minutes."

All officers and most of the crew aboard the naval craft were lost because the ship "sand in less than a minute." Most of the crew aboard the freighter were rescued.

L'il Abner's a Bust

Yanks Dig Up History as They 'Fiddle Around' Nero's Villa

With the Fifth Army, Anzio Beachhead, May 4 (AP).—Between digging for marble statuary in the ruins of Nero's villa and bunking in the seaside exits of ancient aqueducts some GI archeologists are finding this an educational war.

"Wish I had a book to tell me who those guys were," said lanky Sergt. Henry Abt of Revere, Mass., pointing to three Roman busts scattered next to the pit containing his antiaircraft artillery range finder.

Pending further identification the sergeant and his men have named their discoveries Anzio Pete, Oscar and Joe.

Finds Ancient Coin

"I also found a copper coin," proudly disclosed Pfc. James A. Watkings of Donora, Pa., "and after I polished it up I could make out a nice looking man's head and the name Augustus. One of the boys around here claims it must have been minted for an emperor back about A. D. 313. I sent it home in a letter."

The trio of marble busts, each well chiseled and only slightly discolored by age, was rooted out by Sergt. Abt's crew from the bottom of a slit trench 5 feet deep at the top of a 30-foot cliff overlooking the blue Tyrrhenian surf. Doughboy opinion is that this was the spot where Nero sawed his fiddle while Rome smoked.

"You can't stub your toe any place in this neighborhood without uncovering a chunk of old marble," asserted Pfc. William L. Lovell of Pollock, La. "Some of the signal gang way in back of us even found a marble head. It was a small kid's. They cal lit L'il Abner."

Rival Chungking Caverns

The rangefinder crew found their headland honeycombed with underground chambers some of which conect with aqueducts and caves opening in the face of the cliff. The cliffs' caverns rival those of Chungking for rockbound safety against air raids. Pfc. George M. Claypoole of Route One, Chricora, Pa., and Pvt. Walter Pazinak of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., make their residence there with such conveniences as electric lights, bedsprings and a roof 20 feet thick.

The only hazard, they said, is when ack-ack gunners pitch empty shellcases over the cliff.

Let Hearts Decide

Women Make Poorest Jurors, Judicial Parley Is Told

Women were described as "notoriously poor jurors" by a Washington attorney speaking on the caliber of juries in the city before yesterday's session of the Judicial Conference of the District Circuit. The attorney, Edmund L. Jones, said he believed this was so, because women let their hearts run away with their minds.

The general competence of jurors here was defended in a lively discussion that ensued, and two judges, Justice James W. Morris, and Justice David E. Pine, both sturdily vouched for the high quality of their juries.

Pointed, but friendly debate between judges and attorneys marked the afternoon's session, which was given over to a consideration of proposed new Federal rules for criminal procedure.

Debate began when Attorney Alexander Holtzoff, secretary of the advisory committee on rules of criminal procedure, explained the purpose of minor changes in the rules on preliminary proceedings.

It continued while Assistant U. S. Attorney Cecil R. Heflin spoke on eight other rules. Heflin commented tha tone rule, governing these who may be present before a grand jury, failed to provide for an armed marshal or a deputy in the courtroom when a prisoner or a witness in custody is ushered into the room.

Earlier in the day, members of bench and bar clashed over the rule for granting of bond by the Court of Appeals, when Attorney John J. Wilson reported on a study of 100 cases involving convicted criminals whose appeals were heard in the District.

Home Front Soothing Syrup

Many 'Trump Cards' Ready For Invasion, Goebbels Boasts

London, May 4 (AP).—Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels fed the Germans soothing syrup for their nerves today with the promise of "trump cards up our sleeves" when the invasion strikes.

"There exist innumerablede- defense measures and weapons so far unknown," Goebbels wrote.

Other reports showed the anxiety of the Germans, now living in anticipation of early Allied multiple land blows.

The Norwegian underground said the Germans are bolstering the far north defenses with troops tested in Rusia. The Belgian underground revealed new Gestapo round-ups and thet Germans themselves forecast that "Alexandria will strike shortly on the Italian Front."

"We know the enemy's preparations fo rinvasion are practically completed," Goebbels said, "but what has been happening in past weks is more than a question of tactics and war nerves than genuine military action."

He claimed bombing 'can't knock out the Luftwaffe," nor paralyze anti-invasion defenses," saying that "Cassino has shown that aerial bombardments, no matter how massive, are not in themselves adequate to break through fixed lines of defense unless ground troops enjoy superiority."

Admitting the invasion would be decisive, Goebbels said ermans could take comfort because behind the westwall there are "a hidden host of unknown preparations."

While Goebbels sought to calm theh ermans, the Moscow radio broadcast to the Reich that "combined blows from the east and west

50 Bomb Tons Fall on Truk, Fires Started

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, May 4 (AP). Far-flying Army Liberator bombers followed up the mauling of Truk by carrier task forces with one of the heaviest land-based aerial attacks on the crippled Japanese bastion in the Central Pacific, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Seventh Army Air Force fliers poured 50 tons of bombs on air strips and adjacent installations in a raid Monday night and early Tuesday morning before the defending garrison had a chance to recover from the 800-ton assault by Admiral Marc A. Mitscher's carrier planes last Saturday and Sunday.

Fires and large explosions were seen in the Truk installations.

Nimitz said antiaircraft fire encountered in the latest raid was "moderate." Two enemy night fighters were in the air but did not fight.

In other Central Pacific aerial sweeps, a single Liberator swooped down on Ponape Monday night, setting a fire in Ponape town. Isolated enemy positions in the Marshalls Islands were bombed and strafed Monday and Tuesday.

Invasion Area Rail Lines Irreparably Crippled, He Says

By the Associated Press

German fighter plane strength and replavement ability has been whittled down so far, Secretary Stimson said yesterday, that the enemy is now relying chiefly on antil-aircraft batteries for defense against large formations of American bombers.

In a news conference discussion, the War Secretary also expressed the opinion that damage already done to German transportation facilities is beyond the Nazis' ability to repaid. Such communications are a vital spot in the German defenses. The enemy must maintain them insofar as possible for movement of armies and supplies to combate any Allied invasion.

In order to conserve their remaining pursuit planes, Stimson said, the Nazis send them mainly against small groups of bombers or crippled or straggling planes.

Many Free of Losses

As a result, he said, American bomber formations now return from missions in many instances with no losses while doing greater damage than ever.

"The mark of our progress is that the opposition is less continuous and the damage we inflict is greater," he said, but added that the German air force is still capable of putting up bitter opposition when Allied planes make very deep penetrations of Germany to strike at vital targets.

The total of bombs dropped on Germany and German-held targets by the Army Air Forces in April was a record 43,500 tons, he reported.

In a discussion of other points, Stimson said all enemy air fields at Hollandia and Aitape, in New Guinea, can now be put to Allied use. Pockets of Japanese in the vicinity, he said, are being mopped up or driven inland.

Japs Pressure Continues

Japanese pressure against the southern defense of Imphal in India continues and may mean the enemy intends another major attack there. Enemy opposition to the Chinese-American-British advance in north Burma has stiffened.

On the southern end of the Russian Front, the Germans cannot withdraw further without exposing Lwow and Brest Litovsk, industrial and communication centers, and are trying to strengthen their positions there and at the Tatar Pass in the Carpathians and before the Galati Gap, gateway into the Balkans.

first two weeks of the celebrated trial.

At the close of the first day of the special proceedings, the lawyer announced he would need at least three days to complete his defense.

"I doubt if the court can grant that much time," said Justice Jennings Bailey, before whom the contempt case is being tried. "I'll rule on that later. At the same time, however, he scheduled another hearing for continuation of the proceedings today at 9:30 a. m.

Witness Request Rejected

Laughlin's first loss in his fight against the contempt citation was the refusal of the court to allow him to cal as witnesses at this time War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, Attorney General Francis Biddle and Justice James F. McGuire of District Court—witnesses through whom he said he would attempt to show the motives behin d the sedition prosecution and the political doctrines involved. Justice Bailey, however, said he would entertain a motion later if it appeared to him that their testimony might be relevant.

There was much ado during the hearing over a remark—"I must be slipping"—Laughlin is alleged to have made during one of the hectic moments of the big trial and which failed to show up in the stenographic transcript.

Two attaches of the staff of Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher who is presiding at the super-trial, Mrs. L. M. Hood, law clerk, and James Menendez, clerk of the court, testified they heard the remark. Mrs. Hood said she also had made a notation of the remark in a notebook.

During Panel Quiz

The remark came, according to the two court attaches, when Justice Eicher asked prospective jurors on a former panel to rise if any of them had read newspaper accounts of the sedition case and four of them stood.

Joseph W. Burns, special assistant to the attorney general, paraded a number of official court reporters and newspapermen to the witness stand, the court stenographers to identify portions of the transcript for which they were responsible, and the newspapermen to explain how and under what circumstances they procured copies of some of Laughlin's motions before they were formally filed in court. The reporters were Arthur Sears Henning, chief of the Washington bureau of the Chicago Tribune, and Philip Warden of the Washington Times-Herald.

Henning testified Loughlin gave him a copy of a motion calling Henry Ford and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as defense witnesses a day before it was filed. He said he did not recall Laughlin asking that no story be carried until the motion had been filed and that he wrot a story about it for publication the following morning. He also said he obtained from Laughlin an advance copy of a motion to impound the records of several organizations, mostly Jewish, but in this particular case, he was told no story was to be published until the motion was filed.

Laughlin read at great length from the indictment in the sedition case in arguing that Byrnes, Biddle and McGuire should be brought into court.

"What has that to do with the testimony of Former Judge Byrnes?" asked Justice Bailey.

To Show Lack of Faith

"Important to show lack of good faith on the part of the Government" in the sedition case," Laughlin replied.

"The defendants in the sedition case are charged with making statements favorable to Hitler prior to the entrance of the United States into the war. I expect to show by the testimony of Byrnes that while visiting Germany for the Olympic games in 1936 he made certain statements complimentary to Hitler and gave the Nazi salute. That would show the lack of good faith in bringing this prosecution. Before the war, if anyone in this country made statements complimentary to Hitler, that was no offense. In Rome, it's do as the Romans do. If Byrnes did those things, the defendants cannot be blamed for doing the same thing."

turnover rate of those having occupational deferments on the manpower-shy West Coast.

2. That "we do not know what vicissitudes lie ahead," the 1,400,000 more men the armed services now plan to induct this year may have to be increased, and civilians must be found to take their places in industry and agriculture.

3. That job turnover under present ineffective manpower controls approximates 6 per cent a month, or 72 per cent a year.

4. That the War Department, though reluctant to induct for special work men who are unwilling to take essential jobs, is ready to cooperate in putting such men to work (at Army pay, minus veterans' benefits) in special units.

Bard, Patterson and Hershey all stressed the danger of a "violent exodus" from war jobs into more permanent peacetime pursuits as war contracts are terminated, cutbacks ordered, and the peace table nears.

Bard warned this may reach its peak when the war with Germany ends, even though the Japs are still far from whipped, and demand for warworkers for some types of work, such as fleet repairs, may be even more acute.

"Such an exodus would absolutely cripple us," said Bard. "At present we have absolutely no means of controlling it."

Montgomery Reports Case of Spotted Fever

Montgomery County's first spotted fever case of this year was reported yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, who said the victim is a young farmer in Gaithersburg.

Dr. Ellicott reiterated his warning of last week to persons walking in wooded areas or among grass and weeds. He urged persons to examine body and clothing for ticks. Infected ticks spread the fever, he said, suggesting their removal with tweezers.

Tito's Army Wants to Send Mission to U. S.

London, May 4 (AP).—Yugoslavia's Partisan army wants to exchange military missions with the United States, a representative of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) declared here today. He also made clear Tito's determination that King Peter must stay in exile until the people ask him back.

Maj. Gen. Vladimir Velevit, who heads Tito's military mission to Great Britain, said Tjto had asked permission to send a similar mission to Washington but had as yet received no reply.

A broadcast communique from Tito's headquarters said his Partisans had inflicted heavy losses on the Germans in battles in Montenegro and Slovenia, slashing at enemy communications in Serbia, Slovenia and Bosnia, and had destroyed the railway station at Klupki in Serbia, five freight trains in the Ljumljana and Trieste areas and sunk four river steamers.

Velevit described Tito's army of 800,000 as being 90 per cent Serbs and as "independent" and "not Communistic." He said that Tito had had no relations with Russia until two months ago, when a military mission arrived from Moscow.

The officer flatly stated Tito would have no dealings with King Peter. "It has been laid down by our council," he said, "that only the people in a free election after the war can decide whether they want a monarchy."

The Yugoslav officer said that the Partisans suffered fewer casualties in actual fighting than when they had been passive and let the Germans rule them, adding that "we estimate we kill four Germans for every one they kill of us."

evacuated Imphal was not repeated.)

Dispatches indicated the Imphal fighting was going steadily in favor of counterattacking Allied troops, whose advanced units were said to be near the edge of the open country north of Imphal. The highway between Imphal and Kohima, however, still was blocked by the Japanese.

Fluid fighting was reported in the mountainous Kohima area. The Japanese for several weeks have held Kohima village—the native quarter—while Allied troops hold strong positions surrounding Kohima town. The two strongholds are on adjacent ridges,, approximately a mile apart.

The communique said RAF bombers caught a U-boat on the surface last Tuesday in the Indian Ocean southwest of Socotra and destroyed it with depth charges. Socotra, formerly a British coaling station, is an island some 200 miles off the coast of Italian Somaliland in East Africa.

(The nationality of the submarine was not disclosed, but the designation "U-boat" indicated it might have been German.)

Soviet Bombs Start 10 Fires In Sevastopol

London, May 4 (AP).—Amerciless night attack by Russian bombers on the German-Romanian garrison jammed into Sevastopol was announced tonight by a Soviet communique which said bombing and strafing silenced many enemy batteries, started at least 10 large fires and caused many explosions.

Soviet troops have ringed about the Crimean port for two weeks but have held off from a frontal assault, apparently to conserve manpower.

The air attack may mean the infantry is nearly ready to plunge in for the kill.

No essential changes on the long land fronts were reported, but some land fighting still is in progress, for the communique said 47 German tanks were destroyed or disabled yesterday.

Red Star reported numerous Russian units had penetrated deep into the foohills of the Carpathian Mountains and begun sharp attacks through the forests against separate enemy positions, since the front there does not consist of a continuous trench-line. The exact location was not given, but it apparently was somewhere in the mountainous corner where the borders of Czechoslovakia, old Poland, Hungary and Romania converge.

The Germans said they had repulsed Russian attacks on Sevastopol, on the lower Dnestr River and the Siret River in Romania. They repeatedly have described some sort of Soviet movements along the Siret as an "offensive" but the Russians have continued silent.

Lend-Lease So Far Totals 30 Billions

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) reported to the Senate yesterday that actual lend-lease expenditures up to April 1 totaled $30,862,687,862, of which $19,700,297,674 represented facilities, goods and services furnished to the British Empore and $4,214,920,449 to Russia.

Reporting on an investigation of lend-lease by the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which he is acting chairman, McKellar said that of the total outlays $2,327,378,789 has gone to Latin America," with the largest expenditures in Brazil."

China got $417,296,436 in direct lend-lease aid.

McKellar made his report to the Senate after Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee brought up a bill to extend the life of the lend-lease authorization act one year, until June 30, 1945. The Senate postponed a final vote until today.

McKellar recalled his dispute last fall with the contention of Senator Butler (R., Neb.) that the United States had obligated itself to spend more than six billion dollars in Latin America in a three-year period. McKellar said the investigation proved that the amount thus far spent in Latin America was $2,327,878,789.

Mayor Chris H. Dailey will be the Republican nominee, delegates to that convention having been instructed for him.

to turn over the firm's books to the Government.

Sowell contended he was removing the poster to show it to his "boss."

His attorney, James C. Leaton, said Sowell had taken down the notice "to study it," and that one corner of the poster was torn "accidentally."

The attorney referred to Sowell as a "minor executive dealing with personnel matters," and added:

"His duties have always included the supervicsion of the posting of bulletins in the administration building."

Rep. Hawkes Blames WLB for Seizure

Quoting President Roosevelt as once having said: "You can't mine coal with bayonets," Senator Hawkins (R., N. J.) told the Senate yesterday that "you can't run a mail orders business with bayonets, either."

Hawkes criticized the Government's seizure of the Montgomery Ward and Co. properties at Chicago, declaring it could have been avoided had the War Labor Board directed promptly that an election be held to determine if CIO unions represented a majority of the Ward workers, at the time the labor dispute arose several months ago.

"The whole case was just as simple as that," Hawkes declared. "Mr. Avery (Chairman Sewell Avery of Montgomery Ward) and his associates were clearly within their rights in asking for an election. Indeed, it was their duty; they had no right under the law to negotiate with a minority of the workers."

Hawkes said the Ward plant seizure concerned organized labor in the same degree as it concerned private business, declaring:

"The working people should realize that the same bayonets now used by the Government to seize private business property may at some future time be used to seize the property of the unions.

Sees "Widespread Fear"

"The people of the United States are not interested in the complicated issues involved in this case, but they do want to know that their Government is not becoming the partner of either labor or capital when theire is a dispute between them.

"The people do want to know that we are not creating dictatorship at home while we are sending millions of our men abroad to destroy it."

North Carolina Convention Backs Roosevelt for 4th Term

Raleigh, N. C., May 4 (AP).—The North Carolina tSate Democratic Convention today unanimously indorsed a fourth term for President oRosevelt and voted to support J. Melville Broughton, Governor of the State, for the vice presidential nomination.

The 3500 delegates stamped, clapped and roared their applause as the two resolutions were adopted without a recorded dissenting vote.

Josephus Daniels, under whom Roosevelt served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the first oWrld War, seconded the fourth term resolution, which was introduced by Robert R. Williams, Asheville lawyer.

Under the resolutions adopted, the tSate's 30 votes will be cast for Roosevelt and Broughton so long as their names remain before the national convetnion.

Pepper's Lead Cut

Jacksonville, IFa., May 4 (AP).—Belated returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary cut slightly into Senator Claude Pepper's lead today, but his renomination without a runoff campaign still appeared likely.

Although opponents accused him of internationalism, general surrender of State's rights to Washington, and "rubber stamp" approval of President Roosevelt's policies, Pepper rolled up 5398 votes more than his four opponents combined.

Unofficial returns from 1392 of the State's 1496 precincts, gave Pepper 178,937 votes, County Judge Ollie Edmunds of Jacksonville 119,430 and three others 54,209.

Pepper's lead over the combined field earlier had run as high as 15,000 at times.

Official returns will be tabulated next week, along with absentee ballots and soldier votes not included in the unofficial count.

Caldwell to Oppose Green

Millard Caldwell, Tallahassee lawyer, and Representative R. A. (Lex) Green, once colleagues in Congress, will be opponents May 23 in a runoff primary to pick the Democratic candidate for Governor of Florida.

Caldwell was top man in a field of six, with 105,241 votes from 1363 of the State's 1496 precincts. Green was second with 100,827 votes, and Ernest R. Graham third with 86,541.

Outdistanced completely were Frank Upchurch of St. Augustine, with 26,904 votes; J. Ed Baker of Umatilla, with 26,083, and Raymond Sheldon of Tampa, with 25,987.

Florida's 18 votes in the National Democratic Convention may be cast en bloc for a fourth term for President Roosevelt. Roosevelt-delegates were leading in 14 contests and candidates pledged to Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia were ahead in four. However, under State party rules, all Florida convention votes must be cast as a unit if two-thirds of the delegates agree on a candidate.

Austin of Cambridge, master of a freighter which collided with the Baltimore Harbor ferry Dixie, April 20, has been suspended for 20 days. Captain Austin is master of the Clio.

The decision of the bureau said that "immoderate speed" was among the grounds for suspension.

A 30-suspension was ordered for Capt. William E. Campbell of the Dixie after a hearing last week.

School Boards Urged to Start Postwar Plans

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, superintendent of public instruction, today urged school boards to begin immediately to do the same type of postwar planning being done by business and industry.

The educational problems of the next five years will be such as to "tax the imagination and resourcefulness of local boards of education and division superintendents," he said.

Dr. Lancaster added it would be of considerable value to the State Department if it were kept advised as to plans and needs in various communities.

Changes made in work done by schools, he said, would involve additional financial outlays, and if State and Federal funds are necessary "it is quite essential that we have a State-wide picture of the developments that are contemplated in order that adequate steps may be taken in the matter of securing additional funds."

Dr. Lancaster suggested that some of the factors deserving consideration include checks on total high and elementary school enrollment for boys and girls and the separate races; ultimate number of schools needed; number of boys from farm families; statistics as to occupations followed by youth after leaving school; number of young people who may be absorbed in industry within 50 miles of the division, at what level should vocational training of various types be offered; need for retraining returned servicemen and warworkers; need of upgrading and retaining persons already employed in the community; and the need for providing some type of guidance program for both in-school children and adults.

Superintendents are being asked to have their school boards discuss the problem with businessmen of communities and enter the conclusions reached on summary sheets. The State board will then be able to get at least a general idea of how far local planning for the future, especially in vocational education, has progressed.

Aviation Exhibit To Open May 12 In Baltimore

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—The general public will have its first opportunity to see some of the latest important aviation developments when an exhibit of Maryland-made aeronautical products is displayed in connection with the aviation planning forum May 12.

Officials of the State Aviation Commission, sponsoring the forum, said that the exhibit would consist of many of the products which are helping make possible the current storming of Hitler's fortress Europe from the air.

Representatives of commercial air lines, manufacturers of aviation equipment and high-ranking military aviation officials are expected to attend the two-day forum at which planning for postwar aviation will be stressed.

Special permission has been obtained from Army and Navy authorities for the showing of many of the products.

Meat Rationing Relaxing Vexes Md. Fish Trade

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Maryland fish dealers predicted today that the easing of the meat rationing program would further glut the wholesale fish market, already overloaded with unusually heavy catches and would tend to depress prices, already low.

An estimated quarter-million pounds of croakers are coming to Baltimore daily and the price today was $3 a box or less. Wholesale shad prices were $10 a box for roe, $2 to $2.50 for split shad and $1 to $1.50 for buck shad.

Season at Height

Virtually all varieties of seasonal fish were being caught in large numbers in Chesapeake Bay and along the Atlantic Seaboard. Dealers said that more men gave up war jobs this year to return to their usual fishing occupation.

Meanwhile, the removal from rationing of all meats except beef steaks and beef roasts was criticized as too drastic today by Baltimore handlers, one of whom declared "there will be chaos if they have to go back on it."

"If the Government intends to abandon rationing of all but the two beef cuts permanently, it is a step in the right direction," one packer said, but asserted there is a possibility that general meat rationing may have to be instituted again in the fall scarcity season.

Where's the Meat?

Another packer opposed removal of point values from any item so long as rigid rationing is a possibility, and predicted the return of high meat point values next fall because of heavy slaughtering now and the possibility of a reduced output because of the feed shortage.

Harry W. Walker, executive secretary of the Baltimore Independent Retail Grocers and Meat Dealers Association, asked:

"What is the point of taking points off, if you cannot get meat?"

Walks in Poor Shape, City Seeks Insurance

Winchester, Va., May 4 (Spl.).—Unable to secure labor or material to repair sidewalks of the city, many of which are in bad condition, members of the council last night passed favorably on the initial readings, an ordinance which would empower the finance committee to purchase personal liability insurance to protect the city in case of suits resulting from accidents.

W. & M. College Rite Honors Mrs. Harrison

Willimsburg, Va., May 4 (AP).—In ceremonies held in the library of the College of William and Mary today the portrait of Hetty Gary Harrison was unveiled by her daughter, Mrs. Charles Baird of Marshall, and presented to the college by Mrs. William R. Massie, honorary president of the Garden Club of Virginia, as a gift from that organization.

"It is very fitting," said Ashton Dovell of Williamsburg, former Speaker of the House of Delegates, who presided at the brief exercises, "that this memorial of Virginia women to one of their own group should have taken form of a portrait of Mrs. Fairfax Harrison given to the College of William and Mary, where generations of her ancestors have lived and studied."

Dovell also spoke of Mrs. Harrison's long services in various restoration projects of the Garden Club of Virginia, in which "she left her mark from Kenmore to Stratford."

In accepting the portrait on behalf of the college, President John E. Pomfret said "Mrs. Harrison comes home again."

President at the unveiling ceremonies were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., John Stewart Bryan, chancellor of the College of William and Mary, Mrs. Lucian M. Hanks, regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association in which Mrs. Harrison had long been active; Mrs. Horace Hawes, of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Stratford; Mrs. Frank Crowin-Shield, Kenmore Memorial Association; Mr. and Mrs. Powell Glass, the latter the outgoing president of the Garden Club of Virginia.

3 Dead, 3 Lost As Freighter Rams Warship

Norfolk, Va., May 4 (AP).—The Navy announced today that three enlisted men were killed and three others are missing after the collision of the destroyer USS Parrott and the merchant ship John Morton in Hampton Roads, near the Naval Operating Base, Tuesday afternoon.

The dead are:

Marion Thomas Brady, fireman, Greer, S. C.; A. E. Garner, water tender, San Pedro, Calif.; John D. Goeller, fireman, Landsdowne, Md.

The missing are: Herbert M. Weaver, water tender, Escalon, Calif.; Irvin Alfred Blenden, water tender, Cedarville, Kans.; Donald Leroy Weese, fireman, Reading, Mich.

Warship Badly Damaged

A large hole was torn in the destroyer's starboard side and several hours after the collision, before she was towed to the Norfolk Navy Yard in Portsmouth for repairs, she was observed listing badly to port in her berth at the naval base.

A civilian who witnessed the collision from a Norfolk-Newport News ferry told a reporter the destroyer was backing out of her bearth and was about 75 yards into the stream when the freighter's bow rammed her amidship.

collided," he said, adding that thrown overboard from the destroyer's deck," the eyewitness related, "and one man was thrown into the water from the freighter."

Rescues Related

The sailors were hauled back aboard the destroyer by their shipmates.

Three of the sailors hurled overboard rescued the merchant seaman and carried him up a rope ladder to the freighter's deck, the civilian reported.

"A big cloud of steam poured out of the destroyer when the ships collieded," he said, adding that three tugs in the vicinity sepd to the destroyer and pushed her back into her berth at the naval base piers. The freighter appeared to be undamaged, he said.

Soviet Decorates Col. Kirkpatrick Of Warrenton, Va.

Warrenton, Va., May 4 (AP).—The first foreign decoration awarded a Fauquier soldier in this war was presented to Lieut. Col. Richard J. Kirkpatrick, Warrenton, recently when he received the Order of the Fatherland's War from the Soviet government.

Colonel Kirkpatrick was one of 29 officers and four enlisted men of the Persian Gulf Command to be decorated by President Milhail I. Kalinin of the USSR, The War Department has announced,

The group was decorated for "the successful performance of the mission of the Persian Gulf Command in the movement of arms, equipment and food supplies for the Soviet Union, thus affording great assistance to the Red army in its struggle with the Nazi German invaders."

Colonel Kirkpatrick, prominent Fauquier sportsman, a member of the Army Air Corps, is a veteran of World War I in which he attained the rank of captain. He reentered the service about two and one-half years ago with the rank of major and was promoted to lientenant colonel when he began overseas service. He is now stationed in the Middle East.

Soybean Planting Soars in Maryland

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Maryland agricultural authorities report that more than 110,000 acres of soybeans will be planted this year throughout the State, as compared with an average of 55,000 acres planted in 1933-43 period.

The Maryland Crop Reporting Service estimated that approximately 50,000 acres would be planted in soybeans for oil and 60,000 acres for grazing, hay or concervation purposes.

Joseph H. Blandford, chairman of the State agricultural adjustment agency committee, reported that the War Food Administration is supporting prices for the crop at a higher level than formerly and is assuring a supply of oil seed equivalent to bean production.

$3 a Vote Is Cost Of County Primary

Hagerstown, Md., May 4 (Spl.)—With only 7 per cent of the registered voters in Washington County voting in Monday's primary, it was estimated by election officials that each vote cost the county $3. The expense of holding the primary is estimated at $7,500.

Meanwhile Republican leaders are wondering whether two Republican election officials in one Hagerstown precinct forgot to vote. The precinct, manned by three officials, recorded only one ballot.

Party leaders said it couldn't have been the rush that made them forget, so they are inclined to think that perhaps the unofficial count is incorrect.

Blast Injures 14 Workers on Liberty Ship

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Fourteen shipyard workers were injured today, four of them seriously, and another may have been trapped by an explosion in the forward hold of the Libery ship Samsoaring being outfitted at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards.

J. M. Willis, yard vice president and general manager, said the cause and extent of damage were unknown. The ship listed heavily immediately after the blast but was righted several hours later.

Willis said a diver would be sent into the hold as soon as conditions warranted a safe investigation.

Four of the injured were taken to hospitals. The others were given first aid treatment at the company dispensary.

Willis said the Samsoaring, launched May 2, would be taken to the Key highway yards for repairs as soon as the water is pumped out and the hold sealed.

Those seriously injured were (from Baltimore, unless otherwise stated):

Carter L. Loving, N. Kulper, C. Doyle, Severna, Md., and Thomas Burnham.

Treated for minor injuries were: O. R. Belsworth, Daniel Dodd, West Ferguson, William Midget, Frank Kaniecha, Edward Justis, Brently Burke, Cecil Rice, Fred Riffle, and Thomas Darver of Frederick, Md.

Former Public Enemy No. 2.

Charles Bird, Now Blind, Given Release From Md. Penitentiary

Annapolis, Md., May 4 (AP).—Charles Bird, 32-year-old one-time Public Enemy Number Two on the records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was granted a conditional commutation of sentence by Governor O'Conor today from a 45½ year sentence in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Bird, who is now blind, was captured in Baltimore on August 7, 1938, after a nationwide manhunt and was given the long sentence after he pleaded guilty to seven charges of armed robbery and one assault with intent to rob with a deadly weapon.

Detainers have been filed against Bird by the States of Ohio, Missouri and Massachusetts for bank robbery, escape from the Missouri State Penitentiary and other offenses, State Parole Director Herman Moser advised the Governor in early April, explaining in the recommendation:

"Inasmuch as it can be reasonably expected that the subject (Bird) will receive substantial sentences on each of the three charges still pending against him, it seems to me that it would be advisable to grant him a conditional release from imprisonment in order that he might be removed to the various jurisdictions for trial."

"Bird has an extremely bad record," O'Conor said, "and would, under ordinary circumstances not even be considered for release. However, since his sentence in Baltimore, a serious infection has caused the removal of both his eyes.

"As a result of assistance rendered to him by a number of outstanding citizens he has made a satisfactory adjustment and prison officials agree with the parole authorities that he merits consideration."

Moser advised the Governor that in the event Bird is not convicted and subsequently sentenced in any of the other jurisdictions Bird will be returned to the custody of the Maryland authorities and be required to submit to the same regulations to which any regular parolee is subject.

Jury Indicts 4 Policemen For Brutality

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Four Baltimore policemen were indicted by the April grand jury on assault and battery charges in connection with what a hospital interne described as a severe beating inflicted upon a former soldier.

Bail for the four, who had been suspended pending the investigation was set at $500. The defendants are Patrolmen William E. Brown, Frank C. Melzer, Michael Gillease, jr., and Robert Hewes.

State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said he would ask for an early trial.

Dr. Frank Palmerson, University Hospital interne, reported that the polcemen brought the former serviceman, Lester C. Pearson, to the hospital accident room in a "practically unconscious state" and bleeding profusely from the head.

Wildlife Food Shortage Seen Due to Weather

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Partially depleted game stocks may result from late planting of wildlife food patches because of unfavorable weather this spring, State Game Warden E. Lee Le Compte said today.

Le Compte said the plantings, made by sportsmen's organizations and farmers with seed furnished by the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, were nearly two weeks behind schedule.

"If we have this summer a serious drought like last summer's, the young plants may suffer serious damage," he declared.

The planting material is a mixture of soy bean, kaffir corn, sorghum, sunflower, millet, rape and hairy vetch seed. The game warden gave much credit for Maryland's enlarged game population in recent years to its widespread use.

Le Compte said that last year more than 30,000 pounds of the seed was distributed to volunteer planters while another 10,000 pounds was planted by game commission agents. He estimated that some 2500 acres were sown with it—mostly in long strips along the edges of fields.

President Urged to Name Willkie Navy Secretary

If the President would select the next Secretary of the Navy on the basis of his mail the appointment would go to Wendell Willkie. The White House has received hundreds of letters and wires urging the appointment. Willkie is the odds-on favorite with the correspondents. The runner-up is Lieut. Comdr. Harold Stassen, an unannounced candidate for the GOP presidential nomination. Former Governor Stark of Missouri, an Annapolis graduate, also has strong mail support, as has James Forrestal, the Undersecretary. Insiders believe Willkie would refuse the post if it were offered to him. Moreover, some of the President's political advisers believe that Willkie would be of more value to the Administration as a political independent than a part of it. Further, there's a general feeling that the Navy Secretaryship won't be filled soon.

This is a fact, however: The President is being urged to take the opportunity brought about by the death of Frank Knox to shake up his Cabinet. And he's getting heavy pressure on it. It's coming from Democratic members of Congress, several of whom already have proposed changes to White House intimates for relay to the President. And it's coming from members of the Democratic National Committee, who believe the Cabinet must be tightened up for the fourth term campaign. And it's coming from one of the last places you'd think of—the Cabinet itself. Who'd be replaced? Why that's all according who you talk to. Each of the nine members have their enemies. Judging from his past record, the odds are long that the President will ignore the demands.

George Barnard, the Republican member of the Indiana State Public Service Commission, is now the favorite for appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission. He would fill the vacancy brought about by the death of Joseph B. Eastman. Barnard is a former law partner of the late Senator Van Nuys of Indiana. The vacancy definitely won't be given to either of the two career men with ICC who are candidates . . . Another appointment slated to come along shortly will make George R. Corbett the secretary of Hawaii . . . After July 1 all Federal vehicles, with the exception of those used by Cabinet members and members of the Diplomatic Corps, must bear a sign printed in "white paint" which says: "For Official Use." The sign must be at least 2 inches high. The sign is required by a rider in the Independent Office appropriation bill and any official who ignores it is subject to a $1000 fine, a year in jail, or both.

Tomorrow is the last day to register in Virginia to be eligible to vote in the November election. Many Federal workers who live in Virginia are on the fence, they don't know whether they should register in the State for fear of losing legal residence in another State. One such employe recently wrote the Civil Service Commission and he received this answer: "The legal residence of a Government employe at the time he entered the Government service is presumed to continue during his tenure of Government office in the absence of clear evidence that he has intentionally changed it since his appointment to the service. If an employe, while in the apportioned service, files application for an exam, he is considered according to his previous residence unless he claims a different State. If he leaves the service and later attempts to reenter the service by reinstatement, proof of residence is not required. If after leaving the service he attempts to reenter through new exam, he must prove residence according to the facts and the law at that time." The State quota law on jobs here, incidentally, doesn't apply to war veterans.

The Army Services Forces is holding a school for its top personnel directors at Fort Washington, Md. More than 700 civilians and officers from the country over are undergoing training . . . Hundreds of young War Department employes will enjoy a new experience on May 31. They'll march to the polls in this voteless city to choose employe representatives on the five new boards of appeal that will settle efficiency rating disputes . . . Leo T. Crowley of Foreign Economic Administration, has appointed a committee to look into all administrative problems. Members are Deputy Administrator Henry Riley, General Counsel Oscar Cox, and Jim McCamy.

Jerry B. Amerine of General Accounting's welfare association, is being inducted into the Army . . . Murray Cramer, chief of the press division at Procurement, took his induction physical yesterday at Fort Myer . . . The Netherlands government is now planning immediate dismissal and treason trials for a small number of Dutch civil servants who have collaborated with the Nazis during the German occupation. A thorough investigation will be made in each case to find workers who were forced to yield under strong pressure.

Two New Herndon Ordinances Become Effective Tomorrow

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau of The Post.
Arlington, Va., Tel. CH. 3239.

Two recently enacted ordinances controlling and licensing of junk yards and regulating the keeping of livestock in the town of Herndon will become effective tomorrow.

The junk ordinance prohibits the storage of used materials on any property facing on a public highway within the town unless the material is inclosed within a building or a fence, and provides for a license fee of $100 for conducting a junk yard or automobile graveyard.

The ordinance provides a fine up to $25 for violations. Each 24 hours of continued violation will be considered a separate offense.

The second ordinance prohibits the keeping of horses, cows or pigs within the town limits except on recognized farms of at least five acres and then only in inclosures not less than 400 feet from a neighboring dwelling or well. The ordinance provides a fine of not more than $25.

Third Aspirant Files For Rep. Harris' Seat

Richmond, Va., May 4 (AP).—A three-cornered fight for the second congressional district nomination for the House of Representatives subject to the August 1 primary is seen with the qualifying here late yesterday afternoon of Porter Hardy, a farmer in the Churchland community of Norfolk County.

Hardy is a candidate together with State Senator Ralph R. Daughton and former State Senator Vivian L. Page, both of Norfolk, for the seat to be relinquished by Representative Winder R. Harris, also of Norfolk, who last week announced he would not again oer for office.

'Blonde Trouble' Hits Andy at the Capitol; Stage Offers Novelty

THANKS TO CAREY WILSON, the paternal power behind the Hardy family films, each of the successive Andy Hardy pictures is aimed at a sound purpose, looking to the solution of adolescent problems and the building of youthful character.

It happens now and again, however, that this purpose is achieved in devious and dubious ways. That is how it is with "Andy Hardy's Blonde Trouble," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater.

In this one, Andy is off to dear old Wainwright for his first year of college, slightly terrified by the prospect of the new life of individual initiative and self-reliance his kindly father has so vividly pictured to him.

Master Hardy's deportment, once aboard the train bearing him away from Carvel's helpful tolerance, gives rise to the suspicion that Harry Ruskin, William Ludwig and Agnes Christine Johnston, authors of the screenplay, had in mind making Andy a horrible example of arrested mental development. One wonders how he ever managed to get through Carvel High School.

Don't Know for Nuthin'

Although Judge Hardy is a distinguished Wainwright alumnus, who has gone to great pains to pave the way for his son's induction into the realms of higher learning, Andy hasn't the faintest notion who the dean of the college is. So he promptly finds himself in the preposterous position of being the jealous rival of his future mentor for the favor of Kay Wilson, taking advantage of Wainwright's newly adopted coeducational policy.

On a train trip that seems long enough on the screen to land all of its passengers at the Golden Gate, Andy absorbs enough demoralizing notions "of the hardships of the frosh" to impel to intrust all of his surplus funds to an unknown blonde—who turns out to be twins—for safe keeping.

Once on the campus, these extravagant misapprehensions compile a sufficient aggregate of personal woe to move Andy to call the whole thing off and get himself away from there. The twins must be kept together in defiance of the paternal edict that has enrolled one at Wainwright and ostensibly exiled the other to the home of an aunt in Vermont—Papa was a sucker for psychiatric suggestion—something has to be done about the Dr. Standish-Miss Wilson "affair," and altogether the junior Hardy is in a mess that makes the picture's title a gross understatement.

Dad to Rescue

It would have been pretty unnerving all around if Judge Hardy hadn't bobbed up at Wainwright just in time to pull Dr. Standish out of the fire of Andy's wrath, establish the twins as a couple of innocent kids and Miss Wilson as something on the pinnacle of maidenly virtue.

Andy presumably has reached the full stature of young manhood when he discovers the wisdom of his elders while home over the Thanksgiving vacation. A fleeting impression, as the picture ends in a glow of complete understanding, is that it must have been at least Christmas before they ever got off that train.

Andy is extricated from the results of his unbelievable immaturity by the usual comic and homely touches that have characterized all of the earlier releases in the series. At the age of 14 pictures, he is still far enough away from responsible manhood to make possible at least 14 more.

Same Old Mickey

Mickey Rooney, in the title role, is as complete an embodiment of the character as he always has been—cocky, contumaceous and a congenitally sound young citizen, when not too seriously misrepresented by a libelous script. Lewis Stone, the immemorial Judge Hardy; Fay Holden, as his wife, and Sara Haden, the Aunt Milly, continue the mainstays of the Hardy home, with Keye Luke injecting a fresh note of comedy as their new Chinese doctor from Brooklyn.

Herbert Marshall is the competent Dr. Standish and Bonita Granville a slightly too sophisticated and poised Kay Wilson to ring true as an impetuous and emotionally irresponsible campus belle. The principal blonde troublemakers are bewilderingly impersonated by the Wilde Twins, Lee and Lyn, with such identical charm as to give the impression that resort has been made to the old photographic trick of double exposure.

George B. Seitz's direction would have shown to better effect had he cut the train ride and one or two other seemingly interminable sequences smack in two.

Novelty on Stage

The Capitol's new stage bill runs preponderantly to rhythm and melody, but embraces one unique novelty act that should pack the house with youngsters throughout the week. This is provided by the Stevens Brothers and Big Boy, as huge, glossy and amiable a brown bear as ever let kids ride him around and then playfully mussed up his handlers.

After Blair and Dean have demonstrated their skill as ballroom dancers, and Senor Cortez delivered himself of an engaging round of mandolin virtuosity and a song, Marjorie Gainsworth head lines the bill in a familiar cycle of songs, with Sam Jack Kaufman as piano accompanist for "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly," "Poinciana," "My Hero" and "I Love You," from "Mexican Hayride," are other numbers to which Miss Gainsworth brings brilliant luster.

The Fox Movietone News, Milt Slosser's increasingly popular organlogue and orchestral interlude of George M. Cohan hits complete a bill that yesterday's first audience looked upon with high favor.

Grin And Bear It

By Lichty

"We, in club work, are more conscious of the war than any other group!—It's so difficult these days to get speakers on any other subject!"

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 4.—Before Ernest Hemingway left Cuba, he and his wife made the arrangements for the wedding of one of their employes. A few days before the wedding a young lady came to the house and told Hemingway that his employe was the father of the child she was bearing. She said that she was reconciled to his marrying the other girl, but that her sole concern was to have a name for the unborn baby . . . The Hemingways conferred with each other, and then Ernest told the girl: "If all you want is a name for the child, you may call it Hemingway" . . . The young lady expressed her gratitude and started to leave . . . "Oh . . . er . . . on second thought," Hemingway told her, "when you register the child's name, you'd better make it 'Hemmingway,' with two M's."

MADGE EVANS

Hemingway, wearing a handsome gray-streaked beard, will leave for England shortly as a war correspondent. In preparation for the job, he's been reporting to George Browne's gym every morning for boxing sessions . . . He won't cut his beard until he returns from abroad. He can't cut it until then because all his papers and credentials have identifying photographs, taken in Cuba, showing him with the beard . . . This week, for the first time, he saw the movie adaptation of his novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." He saw the picture in two sittings, leaving at the end of an hour, the first time, and then returning for the rest of it, the second time. He was disappointed, not in the actors, but in the treatment of his anti-fascist story.

Rex Stout, John Selby, Helen MacInness and Louis Untermeyer made a war bond tour of West Virginia last week. In Huntington, Stout attacked former Senator Rush Holt, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, for his America First Committee record . . . The next day, A. C. Spurr, the utilities man and chairman of the West Virginia War Finance Committee, wired instructions that Stout was to refrain from political speeches during the war bond tour. Stout refused to obey the order. In Charleston, he told the audience: "In this country, for some darn fool reason, when a man wants to make a statement about a man in Maine, he goes to Arizona to do it. I reverse the procedure, by talking about a West Virginian while in West Virginia. I am a taxpayer. My taxes helped pay this man's salary in the Senate. I think I got gypped, and since I find myself in West Virginia, I can think of no better place to register my complaint."

Count Fred de Marigny has made two attempts to join the British army and submitted to an operation to be able to pass the physical examination . . . Margaret Webster, the noted Shakespearean actress-director, is in the hospital . . . Madge Evans is convalescing from the burns she received when a boiler burst at her New Jersey home . . . A Dramatists Guild arbitration may be brought soon to solve the differences between Richard Wright, author of "Native Son," and Paul Green, who helped Wright dramatize it. Green, the Pulitzer Prize playwright, owns 45 per cent of the royalty rights and refuses to consent to the production of "Native Son" in the Argentine and in Europe after the war, because it might reflect upon America's Good Neighbor policy.

HEDDA HOPPER

Light on 'Dark Waters'

Hollywood, Calif., May 4.—Ben Bogeaus is talking "Dark Waters" to Merle Oberon, Franchot Tone, and Tommy Mitchell, with Joan Harrison producing. "Not a bad little deal," says I. And if the script is as good as the story, it should make a mighty exciting picture. . . . Who do you think is testing to play a 6-foot girl opposite Mickey Rooney in the last Hardy picture before Andy goes to war? Loretta Young's baby sister, Georgiana Young. She's not 6 feet, but with lifts in her shoes she could manage. It's a fine part. She meets Mickey on a blind date. . . . Sam Wood always was ambitious. Since he's making independent pictures, he's even more so. Gary Cooper will do his "Jubal Troop," which William Menzies and John Hambleton have been working on while Sam was doing "Casanova Brown." Opposite Gary are two females, and their parts are of equal importance, so Sam's working on this lineup: either Ingrid Bergman or the two sisters, Olivia De Havilland and Joan Fontaine. Well, you can't kill a man for trying!

MERLE OBERON

Archie vs. Charlie

That Ed Gardner of Duffy's sure gets around. He'll sharpen his wits with Edgar Bergen's Charlie. Well, I'll put my money on the boy from Brooklyn, since he has a little shaver of his own named Ed, jr. . . . Eva Gabor says, "New York is the last roundup." . . . I'm glad Andy Stone will add a comedy scene with W. C. Fields for "Sensations of 1944." We don't see enough of Fields. . . . Tim Durant is back to Minna Wallis again, even with Dancer Katherine Dunham in town, but I hear he broke out with a big party for Miss Dunham over the weekend. . . . Henny Youngman claims Ben Hecht is a "superman on the typewriter," and looking for new words to conquer. . . . Tom Treanor is on his way to the front, hoping to beat the invasion. Title of his book will be "One Damned Thing After Another." It hasn't yet been sold for a movie but should be. . . . Gloria De Haven's gettin' on. She's been added to "Thin Man Goes Home" with William Powell.

Hayward Comes Home

Capt. Louis Hayward has an honorable discharge from the Marines—the one thing he didn't want. Captain Hayward took those Technicolor shots at Tarawa. Two weeks before that battle they wanted him to give up and come home. He wouldn't. He went into battle with a gun in one hand, a camera in the other, and Tarawa was the one place in the South Pacific where his asthmatic condition didn't affect him. He'll be coming back to pictures. Let's hope Hollywood gives him the parts he deserves.

Poor Little Snow White

"Snow White," traveling with the picture, was stricken with the mumps in Pittsburgh. Kiddies there are shocked that "Snow White" could be ill, but just the same they're sending cards, flowers, and lollipops to the hospital where she's resting. Her name—Adriana Caselotti.

Phone Official Is Speaker at Silver Spring

Postwar planning today challenges business groups of the country to make the future of tomorrow, Fred G. Macarow, official of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., told the Silver Spring Board of Trade at its dinner meeting Wednesday night.

A member of the Washington Board of Trade postwar planning commission, Macarow said, "One major problem will be the change over of people from one job to another. Even though sufficient jobs will be available it will be necessary for people to adjust themselves from one type of work to another."

Citing that the size of this problem will not be as great in Washington as in an area where industries have been largely or wholly converted to war production, he said in the Washington district better than 85 per cent should be able to remain in their present type of work.

Admiral Adolphus Staton, USN (ret.), head of the trade group's postwar planning committee, pointed out that if business is unable to get enough self-respecting production jobs in the postwar era for the unemployed, then, and "then only should Federal funds come into the picture."

The Silver Spring group is now affiliated with the United States Chamber of Commerce, John R. Fagan, president, announced.

Suburban Hospital Receives 10-Bag Gift of Potatoes

Should there be another shortage of potatoes, patients at the new Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, will have an ample supply, thanks to Herbert Bryant, Alexandria, Va., and Washington Grove, Md., who has given ten bags of 150 pounds each, officials said last night. Overstocked with a supply of potatoes, Bryant will continue to supply the hospital for the time being "free of charge," Mrs. Katherine Spencer, dietitian at the hospital, said.

Additional gifts announced yesterday by J. Dewey Lutes, hospital superintendent, include two fourbed wards sponsored with gifts of $300 each by the Women's Guild of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church and by August G. Gutheim, Chevy Chase, Md., in memory of his wife, Augusta Meuser Gutheim. The latter donor's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Gutheim, Battery Park, is a volunteer clinic worker of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Public Lay Health Committee which sponsors public health clinics at the hospital.

The Newcomb Club has sent a check of $160 to the hospital for the use of the Social Service department for purchase of glasses, braces, crutches, dentures, etc., for needy patients. Another gift was $50 from the Mount Calvary Baptist Church, for Negroes, Lincoln Park, Rockville, of which the Rev. Ernest Palmer is pastor.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ONLY A FEW KNEW IT, but one thing Secretary Knox was working on when he died was a personnel plan which the admirals didn't like—as they didn't like a lot of things. This plan was to train a lot of younger, promising reserve officers to become permanent, regular Navy officers on a par with the Annapolis elite.

To understand the revolutionary significance of this, you have to realize the exalted position held by Annapolis graduates. In his recent report Admiral King, Commander of the Fleet, said that 90 per cent of the Navy now consists of USNR rather than USN (United States Naval Reserve rather than the United States Navy). But he did not go on to say that the remaining 10 per cent of USN officers—in other words, Annapolis—holds the Navy completely in its hand, has a powerful, unbreakable grip on the entire machine.

Today every important command in the fleet is held by an Annapolis graduate. Only the command of over-age destroyers or escort vessels or other unimportant jobs go to non-Annapolis reserve officers. Yet these reserve officers are the ones who want to get the war over in a hurry, are the most energetic cutters of red tape, the most daring fighters in the Navy.

Annapolis Clique

FEW PEOPLE OUTSIDE the Navy know how the Annapolis clique looks out for itself, and the stranglehold it has on personnel. When a group of young flying officers land on a Pacific island, for instance, and call on the U. S. Naval base commander, he says:

"Welcome, gentlemen. We are glad to have you aboard." Then, looking them over, he adds, "Are any of you from Annapolis?"

If so, that officer is taken off to get a special bunk, is set apart, looked up to as one of the inside ring.

"Annapolis men stick together like a fraternity," commented one officer just back from India.

This Annapolis fraternity system was one thing which Secretary Knox, shortly before he died, wanted to tackle. He pointed out that, in another year or so, the United States Fleet would be much larger and would lack enough regular officers of the type qualified to command big ships. So he proposed taking the best reserve officers off of small commands at sea, giving them a year's intensive training, and treating them like Annapolis grads—all on condition that they continued in the Navy after the war.

Knox's Navy

ONE OF THE LAST persons to whom the late Secretary of the Navy talked shortly before he died was his close friend, Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire. To the very end his mind was on the Navy.

Knox told Bridges of his struggle to build up the fleet from its desperately weak state following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"Only a few of us, who were in a position to know all the facts, realized how badly crippled our Navy was after Pearl Harbor," Knox informed Bridges.

"But now," he added, "the Navy is the greatest fighting force in the world. The American people will have even more reason to be proud of its accomplishments in the months to come, when we will form a steel ring around the possessions the Japs have acquired in the Pacific and will completely cut the Japs off from those possessions.

"It won't be very long," Knox predicted, "until we have the Japs completely isolated in the Pacific and they will wither on the vine."

Jinxed by His London Remarks

AFTER MONTHS of bitter internal squabbling, the Senate Military Affairs Committee soon will recommended the promotion of Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Chief of the Army Service Forces, to become a permanent major general. However, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton of "slapping" fame, who, like Somervell, is only a colonel in permanent rank, will not be approved for promotion.

Inside fact is that the committee was all set to okay both officers at a recent closed-door meeting, but Patton again jinxed himself by his untimely London statement that it was the destiny of the United States and Great Britain (later he added Russia) "to rule the world."

Meantime, Somervell's promotion was held up by a hot fight over committee procedure. Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky furiously objected to the discharge of a five-man subcommittee, headed by himself, which had been considering wartime promotions. Chandler charged that the referring of the Somervell and Patton nominations to a new subcommittee, composed of Chairman Bob Reynolds, Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah and Senator Warren Austin of Vermont, was a violation of "good faith."

"I have been dealt with unfairly," stormed the Kentuckian, in closed session. "The discharge of my subcommittee was put over without my knowledge while I was out of town. I wouldn't have known a thing about it had I not received a letter from Senator Thomas advising me of the change. I think I am entitled to an explanation of this arbitrary action."

Chandler's remarks were aimed particularly at Army stooge Senator Rufus Holman of Oregon, who sponsored the motion to discharge his subcommittee and set up six new subcommittees to act on promotions.

Holman hastened to explain that he had no grudge against Chandler and that his motion reflected no criticism of the Kentuckian's handling of nominations. Blushing nervously, he added:

"It was a terribly difficult job for one subcommittee to be considering all these nominations. I felt that we could do a better job and expedite matters if the work was divided up."

Holman significantly omitted that he has been the prime mover on the committee for the promotion of his friend, General Somervell. This was the principal, if not the only, reason for his motion. However, Chandler, though a Somervell booster, was in no mood for apologies. He wanted his subcommittee reinstated and said so bluntly.

The atmosphere became so heated that Senator Austin had to step in as peacemaker. Pleading for order, he declared he was sorry anything had come up to "interfere with the good will which members of the committee feel toward each other."

"Let's not lose our tempers," cautioned Austin, who almost lost his glasses in the excitement. "I am sure this can be straightened out amicably."

At another closed-door meeting the following day, Senator Ed Johnson of Colorado offered a motion in Chandler's absence reinstating the Kentuckian's subcommittee with all of its original powers. Action on this was deferred until a full committee meeting, scheduled for today, at which there will be a showdown on future procedure regarding promotions.

NOTE: Military Affairs Committeemen were less disturbed by Patton's "destiny" remarks than by his indirect dig at American women, when he declared that victory on the European front could be hastened, and he could start fighting the Japs, if American soldiers made their wives and sweethearts jealous by telling them about the pulchritude of English girls.

(Some people think they are)
But Oakite cleans 'em cleaner—and
More quickly, folks, by far!

FOR ALL WAR-TIME CLEANING
OAKITE
The gentle-grease-dissolving cleaner that saves soap
A TEASPOONFUL OR TWO IS ENOUGH

EVEN if you must Skimp on House Cleaning time...
Don't Skimp on Health Protection...
Make your Home CLOROX-CLEAN!

EVEN when your house cleaning time is limited there should be no slackening of the sanitary measures that are so important to greater health protection in the home. Keeping healthy is more necessary than ever during these critical times when there are fewer civilian doctors and when America's manpower must be kept on the job for Victory. It's easy to provide increased home health protection by making Clorox a standby in your daily cleansing routine.

WHY TAKE CHANCES! "When it's CLOROX-CLEAN it's hygienically clean!"

In Kitchen Cleansing it's important to concentrate on making germ "danger zones" sanitary. The simple, efficient way to greater kitchen sanitation is to use Clorox in routine cleansing of refrigerators, sinks, drainboards, china and glassware; dishcloths and dish towels; floors, garbage containers.

In the Bathroom ordinary cleansing methods are not enough, for bathroom surfaces may look clean, yet be covered with invisible germ dangers. Here again, Clorox provides greater sanitation in the cleansing of tile, enamel, porcelain, linoleum and wood surfaces.

Every Housewife enjoys the prestige of snowy-white cottons and linens. Clorox gently bleaches white cottons and linens (brightens fast colors), removes stains, even scorch, mildew... reduces rubbing, prolonging life of precious fabrics. And Clorox in laundering is an added safeguard to family health.

Clorox is ultra-refined, free from caustic, an exclusive, patented quality-feature. It is concentrated for economy and has the same full strength, same high quality standards today as always. Simply follow directions on the label which lists many important household and personal uses. There is only one Clorox... always ask for it by name.

Dog Pound Work Halted in Fairfax

Supervisors Act On Protest by Citizens on Site

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors has ordered that all work on the construction of a proposed county-operated dog pound cease, pending action of the Board of Zoning Appeals on application of the board for a use permit to operate a pound, potters field and incinerator on a tract of 15 acres, recently purchased for this purpose.

Action of the board was taken following strong protests made by a delegation of citizens residing in the Fairfax area, against the pound's location, and when it was learned that the property is located in a suburban residential district and not in an agricultural district as at first thought.

Several members of the delegation protesting the pound's location live on property adjacent to the site, and others own nearby property. They contend that establishment of the pound and potters field would lower their property values and would create a nuisance.

Among those lodging protests were Reed Thomas, Frederick W. Richardson, Amos Chilcott, Miss Mavis Cobb and S. G. Ansley. Letters of protests also were received from four prominent Fairfax attorneys, including former State Senator John W. Rust, Wilson M. Farr, George B. Robey and Charles Pickett.

Offered to Buy Site

Thomas offered to purchase the pound property, and assist the board in locating other more suitable property for this purpose. He indicated that unless the board canceled its plans to establish the pound on the property in question, steps would be taken to obtain an injunction against the board in the Circuit Court.

The tract, located on the Jermantown rd, west of Fairfax, was recently purchased for establishment of a county operated pound as provided for in a recent dog ordinance, adopted for the purpose of controlling the rabies epidemic in the county. Actual construction of the pound building has already begun, as well as improvements to other buildings on the property.

Under the county zoning ordinance, any action of the Board of Zoning Appeals may be appealed for final review by the supervisors. Thus if the application is denied, and an appeal is made, the supervisors will be required to review their own appeal.

An ordinance providing for rules and regulations governing the use and operation of the water and sewer system in Sanitary District No. 2, embracing Accotink village, was tentatively adopted by the board and set for public hearing at 2 p. m., May 17.

The regulation set up service and connection charges for property owners within the village, and requires that all dwellings and business establishments within the district be connected with the system not later than September 1, 1944. The monthly service charged was tentatively fixed at $4 per dwelling unit.

Several road matters were held over until the board members can confer with State Resident Engineer W. Frank Smith. The board granted a permit to E. F. Campbell, Falls Church district, to park a trailer in accordance with the provisions of the county trailer park ordinance.

Alexandria Marine on 'Sunk' Ship

A Marine combat correspondent from Alexandria, Sergt. George E. McMillan of 1707 Duke st., now on duty in the South Pacific, recently had the novel experience of being aboard a transport which both the Japanese and Nazis claimed to have sunk.

McMILLAN

The story was told by McMillan's comrade in combat, Sergt. James F. Moser, jr., of 510 South Main st., Culpeper, Va., also a Marine correspondent, who described the incident as follows:

"As this former luxury liner slid peacefully through Pacific waters, not many hours away from the West Coast, an announcement of her sinking 'with loss of all lives,' was made by the Japanese. Astonished passengers felt uneasy momentarily, but uneasiness soon gave way to hearty chuckles and jokes at the claims.

"Said one jokester: 'It's not so bad being dead down here at the bottom of the ocean, but I'd rather be alive in Washington!'

Everybody Aboard Dry

"Tonight there are Marines, sailors, soldiers, seabees Coast Guardsmen, and Army nurses aboard—all very dry. They are slated for points throughout the south and southwest Pacific.

"Sergeant McMillan and I boarded the 'water-logged' ship together at its first stoy after leaving the States when, according to the Japanese, she was already in Davy Jones' locker.

"'We've weathered storms and enemy action,' one crew members said, 'and we don't believe anything will get us. But there will be other false claims by our enemies. You can bet on Tojo and Adolf!'"

Sergeant McMillan, 31, entered the Marine Corps as a correspondent in July of last year after leaving the Office of War Information where he was assistant chief of the news bureau, having formerly been chief of the press section of the Office of Emergency Management.

Went Overseas in Winter

He received his training at Parris Island and returned for an assignment with Marine public relations in Washington on October 8. Just before Christmas he was transferred to San Diego, Calif., and left for overseas in mid-January. His family received word that he had been ill with "cat fever" and was in a hospital for two weeks at a transient center in the South Pacific before proceeding to a new secret assignment.

Born in Knoxville, Tenn., Sergeant McMillan attended the University of Tennessee and was employed by a Long Branch, N. J., newspaper. Later he worked on the Works Project Administration writers' project in the national office and was transferred to the first civilian defense committee which later became the Office of Emergency Management.

He and Mrs. McMillan have a son, Christopher Taylor McMillan, aged 1½ years. Mrs. McMillan, the former Virginia Cocalis, is a writer in the OWI news bureau.

St. John's Church at Forest Glen Buys 12-Acre Chapel Tract

Purchase of a 12-acre tract, the Mathews estate on Old Bladensburg rd., Four Corners, Md., as a site for a chapel of St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, Md., was announced yesterday by the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, pastor.

Postwar plans call for the construction of a parochial school and convent on the property.

The Food that wrote "Salad" INTO MILLIONS OF MENUS

Remember when?

When automobiles were getting their first self-starters?

When the hem of fashionable women's skirts ran to their ankles?

When William Howard Taft was president?

When "You Great Big Beautiful Doll" was a hit song?

When everybody was telling "Ford jokes"?

Those were the days when the American "square meal" was based on the meat-potatoes-pie axis.

People never, never ate salads . . . well, hardly ever! That was partly because nobody had ever told them about salads. Partly because the man of the family considered salads as sissy—"rabbit food." Partly because mother had to beat up her own mayonnaise—a troublesome, tricky operation, and not always a success. And partly because those who knew about salads knew about such unattractive ones. What passed for a salad in those days usually consisted of lettuce shreds floating in vinegar, with a slice of hard-boiled egg on the side to cheer it up.

The man who did the most to change all this was Richard Hellmann. He had a delicatessen business and a wife with a wonderful mayonnaise recipe.

What Richard Hellmann Told the Ladies

Hellmann made up mayonnaise according to this recipe to sell with his own salads. Evenings, after his shop was closed, Mr. Hellmann sold additional amounts of his mayonnaise from door to door, first in little wooden "boats," later in glass jars trademarked "Blue Ribbon." He told the ladies that he could make a better real mayonnaise on a large scale than they could make at home. At first they were skeptical. Who ever heard of such an idea! Everybody knew that making mayonnaise took a "knack." It was a tricky thing. Besides, mayonnaise had to be absolutely fresh.

Hellmann had an answer to that problem, too. He invented a new system of distributing his product—store-door delivery by fast truck. He put up plants in various parts of the country, advertised the joys of eating salads. He gave good advice on making meals more appealing and diets more varied. That's the way he sold his mayonnaise.

In 1932 the Hellmann organization joined forces with The Best Foods, Inc., which then made mayonnaise under the Gold Medal brand. Today the Company's Real Mayonnaise is marketed in the East under the original trade name of Hellmann's, and in the West under the Best Foods label.

Today we're a salad-eating nation, and the better for it. Hellmann didn't do this alone. Many influences helped. The trend of the times was with him.

52 Different Ways to Serve it!

The makers of Hellmann's and Best Foods Real Mayonnaise believe in educating the public to eat salads and suggesting ways to cheer up wartime diets with mayonnaise. And women say they have found 52 different ways to use mayonnaise—as a spread for bread—in sandwich fillings—for cooking in sauces—for seasoning—and of course, in salads. Nutrition experts have noted with approval that mayonnaise helps people to eat and enjoy 6 out of the "7 Basic" food-groups recommended for daily diet in the U.S. Official Food Rules.

Maybe you never thought of this delightful food in terms of food energy; but it's a fact that this Real Mayonnaise, containing nothing but what women know should go in it—eggs freshly broken from the shell, added egg yolk, "Fresh-Press" salad oil, vinegar, and seasonings—provides almost exactly the same amount of energy—spoonful for spoonful—as vitaminized margarine, or butter!

Use it more ways—more often. A little real imagination and a little real mayonnaise can take you a long way!

Death By Fire

Washington's slaugther of innocents by means of fire is one of the scandals for which this city has long been notorious. It continues year after year. Helpless victims are caught in firetraps that serve as rooming houses, often in flagrant violation of the law. In many instances they are cremated, jump to their deaths from windows, or are suffocated by smoke. Last year 25 lives were lost in the District by these means, largely because the city fails to enforce reasonable safety standards.

Manslaughter charges have been lodged against Thomas B. Lawler and Jacob W. Block in connection with the fatal fire at 51 Randolph pl. two weeks ago. This is a salutary indication that our law enforcement officials do act when flagrant violation of safety standards appear to have resulted in fatal burnings. But isolated prosecutions, valuable though they may be in securing justice in individual cases and in warning all violators, are far from being a complete answer to the dilemma. Several thousand District rooming houses have been denied licenses because they do not meet minimum safety requirements. But in many instances it has been impossible to obtain the materials required to bring those rooming houses into line with the city's fire regulations. And the law could be enforced in some cases only by closing up the places in the face of an acute housing shortage.

The shortage of materials does create a real dilemma in this emergency. We think it is about time, however, to renew the pressure on the WPB to release materials for essential safety work. The inexcusable aspect of the whole situation is that nothing was done about it in times when ample materials were at hand. Some more effective means of enforcing the law will probably have to be found when the war is over. The sacrifice of citizens on pyres resulting from loose enforcement of obsolete laws is a disgrace that the Capital should not be asked to tolerate a moment longer than is necessary.

Hyphenated Americans

Something called a Polish-American Congress is scheduled to be held in Buffalo the end of this month. Its purpose, apparently, is to mobilize American citizens of Polish ancestry in regard to a European boundary dispute. The purpose is dangerously un-American—in the most literal sense of that badly abused term. For it would lead Americans to behave as Poles—that is, to identify themselves with a nationality they voluntarily renounced when they assumed the obligations and received the privileges of American citizenship.

In his column in The Post about a week ago Marquis Childs called attention to the danger of just such current attempts to tweak the sympathies of foreign-born voters on the basis of their national origin. We wholly agree with him that "behind the constant insistence on how Polish-Americans and other hyphenates will vote are special interests with foreign axes to grind." That members of Congress have lent assistance to these special interests is certainly no credit either to their patriotism or to their intelligence.

Ten Congressmen of Polish background some months ago sent the following greeting to the convention of the Polish National Alliance at Boston: "We, the undersigned members of the Congress of the United States, will always be on the alert over the interests of the country of our fathers, Poland, of our valiant ally in the war against the common enemy." No doubt it was in this spirit that one of the signers, Representative Lesinski of Michigan, so intemperately denounced Prof. Oscar Lange and Father Stanislaus Orlemanski from the floor of the House on Tuesday for their recent mission to Moscow. He was using the forum of the United States Congress to speak for a group of Poles rather than for Americans he was elected to represent.

Better than any admonition we can offer on this score are words spoken by Theodore Roosevelt back in 1915:

> There is no room in this country for hyphenated Americanism . . . The one absolutely certain way of bringing this Nation to ruin, of preventing all possibility of its continuing to be a Nation at all, would be to permit it to become a tangle of squabbling nationalities . . . each at heart feeling more sympathy with Europeans of that nationality than with the other citizens of the American Republic. The men who do not become Americans and nothing else are hyphenated Americans, and there ought to be no room for them in this country. The man who calls himself an American citizen and who yet shows by his actions that he is primarily the citizen of a foreign land, plays a thoroughly mischievous part in the life of our body politic.

This dictum, it seems to us, applies with particular force to men who have been singled out for leadership. Left to their own impulses, foreign-born voters will cast their ballots on election day on very much the same bases as other Americans in the communities where they live. When Chairman Spangler of the Republican National Committee predicted that they would desert the Democratic Party en masse on foreign issues, he gravely impugned their Americanism. When propagandists, alien or American, try to make such issues paramount, they do a grave disservice to our foreign-born and to the country they adopted.

Rationing Outlook

In an article published a few days ago by Collier's, Price Administrator Bowles gave some tentative answers to the title question, "When Will Rationing End?" He indicated that there might be "some relief" from meat rationing in 1945 and that it might "possibly" be abandoned when the European phase of the world conflict was over. If at the time of writing Mr. Bowles anticipated the suspension announced Wednesday of ration requirements for most meats, it seems strange that he should have been so studiedly vague in his reference to the outlook for meat rationing. On the other hand, he may have wanted to impress the public with the probable need for indefinite continuance of the meat rationing program, since the present abundance of meats is the result of a combination of circumstances of a temporary nature. Thus, an extraordinarily heavy movement of livestock to market, encouraged in part by acute shortages of feedstuffs, has congested storage space and made it imperative to provide enlarged outlets for meat products to prevent spoilage. In addition, lend-lease and military buying of meats has declined sharply.

To what extent present unbalanced conditions are the result of official mistakes of judgment is a question that is being hotly disputed. However, regardless of the causes of the present meat glut, representatives of the livestock industry as well as Government officials agree that the abundance now in evidence will be comparatively short-lived. They foresee shortages immediately ahead of us, though opinions differ as to the severity of the future pinch. Colonel Houston, who is in charge of the OPA rationing program, thinks it likely that the country will return to meat rationing next winter, but he believes that the "worst of the belt tightening for the civilian is over." He also looks forward to a further shrinkage of the rationing of processed foods, whereas Mr. Bowles, in the Collier's article, surmised that rationing of processed foods would outlast the war in the Pacific.

Mr. Bowles further predicts that the rationing of passenger tires, automobiles and gasoline will outlast the war in the Pacific, though in respect of tires and automobiles he thinks that some relief may be possible after the end of the war in Europe. All this adds up to saying that rationing is with us in various forms for the duration, despite the marked relaxation of restrictions on food consumption. Mr. Bowles stresses the fact that items will be added to or dropped from ration lists as changing needs and fortunes of war create new demands for goods or reduce the drain on existing supplies. Indeed, Mr. Bowles thinks that rationing of some scarce commodities, such as durable consumer goods, may continue well into the postwar period. For instance, automobiles, electric refrigerators, washing machines, radios, etc., are likely to be extremely scarce in relation to consumer demand for a considerable time after peace is declared. Some system to assure equitable distribution of such scarce goods will be desirable, though, as Mr. Bowles says, planned distribution does not have to take the form of coupon rationing. Instead, voluntary allocation of supplies by the industries concerned may be preferable.

Mr. Bowles emphasizes the fact that the WPB and other Federal agencies—not the OPA—determine what goods are to be rationed. Moreover, the OPA does not control the supplies of basic materials subject to rationing. That task falls to the WPB, the Petroleum Administrator for War, the War Food Administrator and the Rubber Director. The OPA's particular job as a rationing agency is to provide for the equitable distribution of that part of the supply of scarce commodities, such as foods, gasoline and rubber allocated by the supply agencies for civilian use.

It is important to keep in mind the restricted role played by OPA in the rationing field. There is widespread public misconception of the extent of OPA's powers, coupled with an obscure feeling of resentment against it, based on a mistaken belief that unnecessary sacrifices are being demanded from the civilian population. Of course, the public has suffered minor deprivations at times owing to mistaken calculations or because of conditions that could not be foreseen. But the major aim of the OPA's rationing activities is to apportion inadequate supplies of specific commodities among the civilian population fairly and equitably, with a view to preventing unnecessary hardships.

Point Of Confusion

For the first time since the beginning of the war we find ourselves rebuked by the Office of Censorship. The occasion of the rebuke is a sentence which occurred in an editorial about the prospective Allied invasion of the European continent which appeared on this page last Monday. "And perhaps before this week is out, and almost certainly before this month of May is finished, thousands will have died." (We trust that our readers will be good enough to notice the qualifying words.) This, it would seem, is contrary to the letter and spirit of Mr. Byron Price's instruction that "it is always hazardous, in connection with future operations, to mention dates, even by month or season."

If we have been guilty of a breach of propriety in this matter, we can only plead that we were following the example of those who are, presumably, much better informed about the invasion schedules than ourselves, and not at all reluctant to talk about them. On Saturday, for example, Mr. Bevin, the British Minister of Labor, said in a speech at Bristol, England, that he was one of the tiny handful of men who know precisely when the invasion will begin. He also said that, though he could not disclose the exact moment, "from now on the hourglass is running out minute by minute." Now if Mr. Bevin's statement meant anything, it meant that the invasion would come within 60 minutes of the time at which he was speaking. This, it seems to us, is considerably more precise than "this month of May."

Meantime, Mr. Sherwood, overseas director of the OWI, was assuring the continental peoples that their day of liberation was "not far distant." Now, "not far distant" is, if you like, a rather ambiguous phrase, but in another respect Mr. Sherwood went much further than we should have dared to go ourselves. He actually named the directions whence the invasion will come. He "spoke of great Allied armies and navies attacking from the west and south." He even identified the commanders in each of these theaters of invasion. This statement, like Mr. Bevin's, was passed by the British censorship and published in American newspapers, again without protest from Mr. Byron Price.

For more than a week the newspapers and radio news broadcasts have been loaded with items, ostensibly originating in places like Bern or Stockholm or Ankara, which have been full of speculations about the date of invasion. For example, an Associated Press dispatch, dated London, April 29, quoted a Swiss newspaper as saying that foreign correspondents in Berlin were betting on an invasion between May 6 and June 7; it also quoted the Swedish radio as saying that it will be between May 2 and May 17 "and probably in broad daylight." Once again this dispatch was passed by the British censorship, and if there was a protest from Mr. Price about its appearance in The Post and other newspapers, we have not heard of it.

Thus, as far as we can make out, the principle is this: It is perfectly all right to mention, not merely by month or season, but by week or by day, or, as in Mr. Bevin's case, by the hour, as long as the mention is for purposes of propaganda or of psychological warfare, whether of Allied or enemy origin. At the same time it is apparently wrong to mention any week, month or season which may have itself been consciously or unconsciously suggested by the propaganda. It is all very confusing, and, we are afraid, a bit over our heads.

Travel Warning

Nomadic citizens and vacation planners will do well to heed the warning issued by the Office of Defense Transportation to cut their traveling to a minimum once the invasion starts. In a recent press release Director Johnson made quite clear that a "strife-torn" beachhead offers no facilities or safety for wounded soldiers and that all American casualties will be immediately evacuated to this country. When this time comes, our transportation system must be free to respond to all demands that are made upon it. In these circumstances any unessential traveler who finds himself indefinitely stranded in the invasion traffic will have only himself to blame. Moreover, even those who must travel may find themselves without reservations, delayed for long hours and forced to carry their own food or forage for themselves. In view of the fiasco in Florida last winter, when hundreds of marooned pleasure seekers sent outraged appeals for help, it would seem that the public is not fully aware of the transportation bottleneck. If we continue to ignore the storm signals, we shall have to learn self-discipline the hard way: by bitter experience and serious discomfort.

DEATH IN THE MARSHES

The marshes drown the moon in strange, dark water.
You will see her struggling there
As thin waves rim the tangled tufts with silver.
You will see the reeds turn silver
Where they bend beneath her clutching fingers.
Failing, she will float, white-faced, among the hummocks.
Falling tides will draw her
Slowly seaward, out across the river.

Assertions Biddle's

By Mark Sullivan

FDR's Powers

ON MONDAY, in Chicago, a Federal Court will hand down a decision in the Montgomery Ward case. The decision will be on a limited aspect of the case—an application by Attorney General Biddle for an injunction, to restrain officials of the Ward Co. from interfering with operation of the plant by the Government.

Nevertheless, the coming decision is likely to bear upon the fundamental issue which underlies the case. This issue is: Did the President have power to seize the Ward plant, involving seizure of the person of Ward's head, by armed troops?

Attorney General Biddle asserts the President had power to seize the Ward plant. He bases the alleged power on two grounds. The first is a law passed by Congress—the so-called Smith-Connally Act, officially the War Labor Disputes Act. But, after citing this act as justification, Mr. Biddle backs away from it. He says: "It is not necessary . . . to rely solely upon the provisions of . . . the War Labor Disputes Act." And again: "Even in the absence of the War Labor Disputes Act . . ."

For not relying wholly on the War Labor Disputes Act, Mr. Biddle did not state his reasons. He was not called on to—he could have any reasons he chose. But some of them may be surmised. One might be that sponsors and supporters of this act in Congress may say it was not their intention that the law should justify such a step as the President's seizure of the Ward plant.

AFTER BACKING away from the War Labor Disputes Act, Mr. Biddle proceeded to base his justification for seizure of the Ward plant on an extraordinary assertion of presidential power—one which, if sustained, will have momentous consequences. Mr. Biddle said:

"Even in the absence of . . . the War Labor Disputes Act . . . I believe that by the . . . aggregate of your powers of Chief Executive and Commander in Chief, you could lawfully take possession of and operate Montgomery Ward & Co., if you found it necessary to do so to prevent injury to the country's war effort."

This quotation is from the opinion Mr. Biddle delivered to the President in advance of seizure of the Ward plant—and therefore before, presumably, he contemplated that seizing the Ward plant would involve seizing the person of the plant's head. But this is not material. Subsequent to the seizure, Mr. Biddle in his application to the court for an injunction, repeated the same assertion in effect, and added: "No business or property is immune to a presidential order." And Mr. Biddle uttered an extraordinary admonition to the court about its duty, the relation of the courts to the Executive: "Particularly in time of war the court should not substitute its judgment for that of the Executive."

MR. BIDDLE'S assertion about the "aggregate" of the President's powers in wartime and the whole of his statements and actions, justify a remarkable interpretation. It would mean that upon the outbreak of war, the President would have unlimited powers; that he would not need to rely upon any grant of power from Congress; that as respects conduct of the war Congress might as well suspend functioning. And conduct of the war may be construed by a President or an Attorney General to include anything the President judges it to include. In effect, upon outbreak of war, the constitutional safeguards of the person and property of citizens would be suspended.

There is a contrary doctrine. It is rooted firmly in one of the great key cases of American law and government—the decision of the Supreme Court in the Milligan case. During the Civil War, Milligan, a civilian, was seized by the Army, tried by an Army court and sentenced to death. Thereupon Milligan appealed to the civil courts, ultimately to the Supreme Court—which said that under the circumstances of the Milligan case, the Army did not have the power it had exercised, and that even Congress had no power to confer such authority on the Army. The court said:

"The Constitution of the United States is a law for rulers and people equally in war and in peace; and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men, at all times, and under all circumstances. No doctrine, involving more pernicious consequences, was ever invented . . . than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of government. Such a doctrine would lead directly to anarchy or despotism. . . ."

False Prophecy

The papers report that food supplies are so ample that they are overtaxing storage facilities. About a year ago a well known writer and anti-New Deal propagandist made the headlines by predicting famine in the United States in February because of the Government's inefficient regulation. When February passed with a well fed population, he predicted the famine would arrive this month.

It seems as though any person, no matter how unqualified, can get good publicity in some quarters simply by attacking the Roosevelt Administration, no matter how contrary to fact their statements may be.

Universal Service

By Paul Schubert

Combat Potential

THREE YEARS after that militant act, "lend-lease," the huge and powerful United States is at long last ready to strike an offensive blow for victory.

It is four years and a half since Hitler plunged Europe into war—more than 10 years since Germany began active preparation for Hitler's war. All through the 30's, the world prepared for war—most of the world, except the United States. In the Far East the guns barked as Japan led off with the invasion of Manchuria, and it wasn't long before the American Panay went down, first of our ship losses in the war with Japan. In Africa the guns barked as Italy invaded Abyssinia.

In September, 1939, the U. S. Navy had a total strength of 126,418 officers and men! As for the Army, it was nonexistant as a military force in that month when the world went to war—the name "Army" was borne by a skeleton framework of professional and reserve officers, and a tiny, poorly equipped "combat" force broken up into widely scattered fragments.

ONCE MORE this Nation survives because other people have stood between us and the enemy—have held off the enemy long enough for us to mobilize, equip, train and deploy an Army and a Navy commensurate with our true military strength.

At last, in 1944, we take the field offensively.

Looking back over this period of preparation, we ask the question, "Would the situation have been changed, if this country had had universal military service?"

One thing is certain. This war was entered upon by the Germans and the Japanese alike, in the belief that America would not and could not be a factor—that the Axis would have won before our potential strength could be converted into real strength.

There, in the factor of time, is the sole argument for the peacetime draft."

UNIVERSAL MILITARY training does not in itself give a nation an army or make a nation strong. In the first place, such training is "universal" only in the sense that every young man must report for training. In actual practice, the number taken is cut down by physical and educational exemptions. The peacetime army under training is only a fraction the size of the fully mobilized wartime army, and the very fact that the peacetime army is under training is evidence of its incapacity as a combat force.

What universal training does is automatically to create a considerable permanent officers corps plus a large number of permanent noncommissioned officers, plus a reserve officers corps, which has had one to two years of active service, plus a huge pool of reserve noncoms.

As a result, when mobilization is necessary, the time lag before the Nation is at full military potential, can be cut down from the present three to four years, to a much shorter period—perhaps less than one year. What a difference that would have made in this war! Some day it may preserve the United States from defeat and extinction.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Mr. Avery's Position

The comments of certain anti-New Deal politicians and antilabor columnists on the Montgomery Ward case have been more than a little misleading. The facts are that the union in question, the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, more than a year ago won a majority in a Labor Board election at Montgomery Ward's and thus gained the right to represent the employes in collective bargaining with the company. This union is influenced neither by Communists nor racketeers.

Mr. Avery, on behalf of the company, claimed that the union no longer had a majority among its employes, and the War Labor Board ordered a new election last January. (The National Labor Relations Board examiner reached the same conclusion just recently.) Pending the new election, which alone could determine whether or not the company's contention was correct, the War Labor Board ordered the company and the union to maintain the same relations between them that had previously existed without alteration for the benefit of either side. This perfectly reasonable order Mr. Avery refused to obey; instead, the company started firing union members right and left. It was this refusal to obey a perfectly reasonable order to maintain conditions pending a new election which brought matters to a head. Mr. Avery's position was so unreasonable that Roger Lapham, one of the spokesmen for the owners of industry on the War Labor Board, denounced his attitude of defiance.

Annuitants' Pensions

Annuitants dependent solely upon small pensions for a living should be exempted from payment of income taxes where age or physical disability prevents them from obtaining employment which would enable them to meet the increased cost of living and pay their income taxes too.

On an annuity of $100 a month it is difficult, if not impossible, to pay an income tax of $11 a month or $132 a year. Many annuitants are retired on half pay or less and where one has been accustomed to earning, for instance, $200 a month, an annuity of $100 a month calls for retrenchments involving deprivations.

There is little or no possibility of effecting a saving in rent where one is paying a rental of $50 a month, for example. Less expensive quarters are not likely obtainable in war crowded communities. After deducting rent and income taxes but $39 a month is left for food, clothes and other essentials. State income taxes make a further inroad.

Higher income taxes may be needed to curb inflation and prevent spending sprees on the part of people with swollen war incomes but taxes on small annuities should be reduced or abolished where the annuitants have no other income and their earning power has ceased.

Where annuitants are not too old or physically handicapped to prevent resumption of their former duties, it would relieve the manpower shortage to some extent were such persons reinstated for the duration in their former occupations with the Government or other services from which retired.

Heartless Vivisectors

A recent article by Paul Winkler in The Post entitled "Science—Nazi Style" is a sickening disclosure of revolting experiments practiced on living human beings by German "scientists," for the alleged purpose of increasing medical knowledge.

But, alas, all of these and similar abominations are not confined to Germany.

In many medical laboratories in our own country today experimental atrocities are being performed on living suffering creatures by heartless vivisectors, who are actuated only by callous curiosity and completely inured alike to the agonies they inflict upon their helpless victims and to the futility of their results.

Does it make these crimes any less that the tortured victims are usually the non-human species of the animal kingdom, ranging from frogs and guinea pigs to monkeys and dogs; in other words, what is commonly known as the "lower animals"? Considering that the leading industry of the noble "higher" animal, man, is now all over the globe the organized mass slaughter of his own species, this classification becomes somewhat questionable.

But in any event does any one suppose that a sadist capable of inflicting prolonged tortures on sentient monkeys or a faithful dog would stop short of human material entrusted to his tender mercies?

Religious Proof

The letter by Mrs. M. W. Noell regarding the movie, "The Song of Bernadette," was answered ably by others, but no one has reminded her that an exciting movie could be presented based on the lives of many brilliant, cultured saints, some of whom were members of the nobility, and two of whom, St. Thomas Aquinas and St. Teresa of Avila, were doctors of the church, certainly highly spiritual and intellectually gifted characters who were neither "cold, hard, cynical individuals" nor "highly emotional peasant types." I recall offhand these examples: Sir Thomas More, Thomas a Becket, Ignatius Loyola, Francis Xavier, Francis Borgia, Aloysius Gonzaga, Dominic.

Most of the saints had highly emotional experiences, purified, however, by the flame of sanctity, experiences similar to Bernadette Soubirous, varying in number and intensity, but all examples of the Creator's love for the faithful.

As to the "intelligent approach, to religious truth," we can name Newman, Chesterton and the Maritains—all intellectuals who were converted by attaining that elevating spiritual satisfaction found in the prolific writings of St. Thomas Aquinas, the angelic doctor, with their amazing subtlety of thought and their so generous and scholarly proofs.

Baby Broker Bill

The recent enactment into law of the so-called "Baby Broker" bill is a cause for satisfaction to all of us who have responsibility for the welfare of children.

The part that The Washington Post has played in helping to bring about this legislation has been watched with admiration by many of us in the past years of slow but sure progress toward the final law.

May I take this opportunity to congratulate The Post for its years of campaigning for a law that would protect Washington babies from a "sale-over-the-counter" start in life, and for its careful coverage and intelligent interpretation of the steps necessary to bring the present law into being.

Cabinets In Exile

By Paul Winkler

Greeks and Yugoslavs

THE RECENT CRISES in the Greek and Yugoslav exile governments have created some bewilderment in American public opinion. Greece and Yugoslavia are both valuable allies in the United Nations, whose cause can only be impeded by internal quarrels in the ranks of its members. The usual reaction one encounters in the United States concerning these quarrels is: Why can't the different factions get together and fight the common enemy in spite of their divergence of views on political matters?

The answer is that the divergence of views is precisely on the identity of the enemy. One faction sees it only as the military power of Germany. The other sees it as the antidemocratic political philosophy of which German military power is only the instrument. The second group, therefore, fights antidemocracy, not only by combating the German army but also by attacking antidemocracy among its own countrymen.

The Greek and Yugoslav conflicts were inevitable because the Greek and Yugoslav governments which joined the Allies were both direct descendants of dictatorial regimes which had existed in those countries for many years. That they are fighting sincerely on the side of the Allies against the German army cannot be doubted. But the underground movements are not content with that. They still remember the semi-Fascistic character of their prewar governments. They remember the long flirtations with Berlin which resulted from the nature of those governments. And now that they have risen spontaneously to fight against Fascistic oppression, they intend to fight against it for their own benefit as well as for the benefit of their enemies, the Germans.

Democratic Governments

These governments, moreover, since they are not the issue of democratic elections, and are not guided by the democratic principles which a different origin might have given them, have not attempted to establish the close contact with the popular movements of the underground which is foreign to their tradition and their habits in government. There is no such clash between the French underground (which is to say the French people) and the Algiers government as exists between the Greek and Yugoslav undergrounds and their governments in Cairo.

The most recent demonstration of the disagreements between peoples and their governments has been provided by what news dispatches from Cairo (filed through heavy censorship) called "mutiny" in the Greek army and navy. The normal reaction to such reports is that discipline has to be maintained in the armed forces, particularly in time of war, and that it is essential that mutinies should be repressed quickly, whatever their justification. But the application of the term "mutiny" to what happened in the case of the Greeks seems to be stretching somewhat the ordinary meaning of this word. The genesis of the trouble appears to have been not a rebellion against authority in the fleet but an action by the Greek government which can reasonably be considered a provocation.

Greek Publisher

Basil Vlavianos, Greek publisher, who is one of the well-known leaders of the liberal Greek movement in this country, gives this report of what happened. As a result of the constant refusal of King George II to form a government in cooperation with the Greek political parties and underground organizations, a delegation of high officers called on Greek Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos, asking him either to accede to the demand of the Greek underground or to resign. Almost all of the fleet, including its chief, Admiral C. Alexandris, and 75 per cent of the army had expressed their dissatisfaction with the Tsouderos government's continued delay in settling this question. Tsouderos, instead of taking measures to calm down the public sentiment, ordered the arrest of the delegation. This strengthened the belief that the royal government did not intend to comply with the demands of the people and gave the revolt its impetus.

It is true that it is not in the democratic tradition for the armed forces of a nation to take a political position. But the men of the Greek army and navy had a particular right to make their feelings known, for they were made up of men who had voluntarily accepted the dangers of escaping from their country to fight for the cause in which they believed—and they seem, therefore, to be entitled to help define that cause, and also to speak for their comrades who were likewise voluntarily accepting great risks to fight for it within Greece.

The mutiny has been crushed. But Premier Tsouderos had to yield his post. Premier Papandreou's success is likely to depend upon the extent to which he follows the principle that the right to govern depends upon the consent of the governed—and for exile governments this means that since the people cannot let their voices be heard, the consent of the most representative national resistance movements is essential to govern.

Spanish Compromise

By Ernest Lindley

Portugal And Sweden Next

THE AGREEMENT with Spain was a compromise. As the State Department's announcement implied, the American Government wished to hold out for more favorable terms. In fact, a few weeks ago more favorable terms were agreed to by the Spanish cabinet. After that setback, the British were content to compromise.

LINDLEY

The compromise does yield tangible benefits to the Allies. Wolfram shipments from Spain to Germany are to be reduced substantially. Within a short time, if the invasion goes well, transportation difficulties may cut them even below the amounts permitted by the agreement.

The Franco government might have benefited more in the longer run, however, by satisfying completely the Allied requests. It has done nothing to deserve the gratitude of the Allies. It has swung with the tide of war from its outright pro-Axis position to one less unfavorable to the Allied side.

Now, it is the turn of Portugal and Sweden to show what they will do to shorten the war. Portuguese exports of wolfram to Germany have been about twice Spain's. For a long time the Portuguese argued that they should not be asked to penalize themselves while Spanish exports of wolfram were allowed to continue. Since the Spanish agreement was reached, the Portuguese government is reported to have dropped that argument and adopted the attitude of a tough bargainer. Spain needed various articles, including oil, which it could obtain only from the Allies. Portugal was guaranteed various essential imports by Britain under the agreement making the Azores available for air and naval bases.

THERE IS NO way, however, in which Portugal can divest itself of its share of the responsibility for shortening or lengthening the war.

This is true of Sweden, also. The Swedish people are overwhelmingly pro-Allied. Their government has pursued, on the whole, a policy of strict neutrality. In various particulars the application of this policy has become less favorable to Germany and more so to the Allies as the danger of a German invasion of Sweden has receded and as it has become more evident that Germany eventually will be defeated.

Last year, in response to Allied representations, the Swedes agreed to reduce their 1944 exports to Germany of iron and ball bearings. Iron ore shipments were to be cut from about 10 million tons in 1943 to about 7,500,000 in 1944. Ball-bearing shipments during 1944 were to be halved. The Swedes, however, refused to curtail ball-bearing shipments during the last few months of 1943, pleading that they had already made definite commitments which they were obliged to fulfill.

The Allied representations were made, of course, with the full knowledge that the destruction of German ball bearing factories was soon to be given one of the highest priorities on the Allied bombing schedule. After the successful raid on the ball bearing plant at Schweinfurt, the Germans rushed to Sweden to make up the loss. When they failed to prevail on the Swedes to grant them a larger total quantity of ball bearings, they brought pressure to speed up deliveries under existing contracts.

TECHNICALLY, Sweden has not opened itself to criticism. There is every reason to believe that the Swedes have lived up to their agreements with the Allies. Informally and unofficially, they may have gone a little further since the direct German threat has faded.

The essential fact remains, however, that Sweden can help to shorten or prolong the war. Swedish ball bearings in German planes are costing the lives of American and British airmen. Swedish ball bearings will help to determine the length of the casualty lists in the great Allied offensives which now impend.

There is no doubt where the sympathies of an overwhelming majority of Swedes and where Swedish national interests lie. They lie in the complete defeat of Germany. The defeat of Germany will liberate Sweden just as surely as it liberates Norway, Holland, France and Belgium. The Swedes can hasten their liberation, or they can delay it. They cannot prevent it.

As long as Sweden was vulnerable to severe German retaliation, the circumspection of the Swedish government was understandable. Now Germany can no longer spare the forces to invade Sweden. The Swedes are dependent on German coal, but there is reason to think that they have stockpiled enough to meet their needs for almost a full year. Their stockpiles of other essentials are believed to be sufficient to carry them through a long period even if, as is unlikely, the Germans should completely cut off their imports both from Germany and the outside world.

THERE ARE various means by which the Allies might bring pressure on the Swedes—among them the blacklisting of SKF, the great ball-bearing producer. Once imposed, the blacklisting might stand for a considerable time after the war.

But such specific measures should not be necessary. The Swedes have a great fund of good will in Britain and the United States. It was not diminished by the war, while the Swedes were under German duress. Now, without important risk to themselves, the Swedes have the opportunity to aid the Allied cause, which is at heart their cause also. If they fail to avail themselves of this opportunity promptly and in full measure, they are likely to find their stockpile of Allied goodwill melting pretty rapidly. The nations and peoples who are expending their fortunes and their blood on the destruction of Nazi Germany and the liberation of Europe will not forget quickly those who, whether as satellites or technical neutrals, persisted in aiding the enemy.

Washington Calling

New Deal Victory

THE REELECTION of Senator Hill in Alabama and Senator Pepper in Florida is bound to give a new impetus to the fourth-term drive. It may help to resolve any lingering doubts President Roosevelt has in his mind.

CHILDS

Against highly organized opposition, well supplied with money, two New Deal Senators invoked the Roosevelt name to win. Impressive victories, they will be carefully analyzed by every politician in the land.

Especially Hill, who has come through with a substantial majority, can take a lot of credit for his win. He had only one opponent, able State Senator James Simpson. Simpson had the powerful backing of the business community in Birmingham.

Winning by a much narrower margin, Pepper's opposition was divided between four opponents. At the same time, however, the campaign against him was more virulent with perhaps even more money spent to defeat a man who described himself as merely—so far as the opposition was concerned—a symbol of FDR.

PEPPER HAD the formidable enmity of wealthy Northerners who have established residence in the resort State. That, of course, is an important reason why Palm Beach went against the New Dealer. The Northerners could contribute handsomely too, to the huge anti-Pepper war chest.

The success of Hill in particular is a definite rebuke to the forces within the South that have sought to block Roosevelt. In their hatred of the New Deal they have been more than willing to accept defeat if it meant an end of the Roosevelt regime. Now they've been set back in a State typical of the deep South.

That much is clear even though the anti-New Dealers did not dare to denounce Roosevelt directly but kept pounding at "regimentation" and "bureaucracy" in Washington. On the other hand Pepper, and to a lesser degree Hill, had to go a long way in demagoguery to win. The New Dealer from the Florida canebrakes rang the changes on "white supremacy."

The two victories tend to confirm what was already fairly obvious—that the Roosevelt opposition is in the rural areas while the strength of the New Deal in the cities seems to be holding. Tampa and Miami went strongly for Pepper and he ran behind in rural precincts.

I've expressed my belief that President Roosevelt would run again for reelection. Among some in the inner circle, however, the fourth term is not taken for granted.

ALTHOUGH HE is completely out of politics, Col. James Roosevelt, the President's son, expressed a dour view of the fourth term in a recent brief visit to Washington. He talked of the disaffection on the West Coast, where he lived before he went to war.

What the Western States will do in the fall has a lot more bearing on the fourth term than the state of mind of the Deep South, which will go Democratic in any event. Conflicting reports reach Washington as to political conditions in the western tier of States.

I've talked with knowing observers just back from there who say, with Jimmy Roosevelt, that FDR's chances are slim in California, Oregon and Washington. Other observers, with equal reason to know, say the opposite—that the President is strong there.

The State of Washington should be safest were it not for the fact that the name of Senator Homer T. Bone will be missing from the ticket. Bone, appointed to a Federal Circuit judgeship, has been one of the most courageous of those Senators who are rated in general on the New Deal side.

Incidentally, the bit of petty politics aimed at forcing him out of Washington as soon as his judgeship appointment was confirmed has boomeranged. Bone is still in Naval Medical Hospital here trying to recover from the effects of a serious injury of some years ago.

Add the results in the recent Oklahoma congressional election to Alabama and Florida and it would seem obvious that a "down with the New Deal" campaign cannot win. That may have been the real meaning of Tuesday's voting.

10,673 Alexandrians Qualify To Vote in Council Election

Alexandria Bureau of The Post.
110 North St. Asaph St. TE. 6838.

Reporting a banner list of 10,673 qualified voters in the coming general election for the Alexandria city council on June 13, City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan has issued a warning that the deadline for payment of poll taxes to be eligible to vote in the November presidential and local elections is 1 p. m., Saturday.

State law requires that the capitation tax be paid six months before a general election, while registration for legal residence must be made 30 days before a general election and up to the day before a primary. Taxes are paid at Sullivan's office on the second floor of the city hall, while registration is made at the office of Fred Petitt, general registrar, on the ground floor.

Back taxes on which penalties are due are required of new prospective voters who have lived in the State up to three years without previously having paid poll taxes. As December 5 of each year is the deadline for payments, the penalties on the $1.50 tax are as follows:

For 1943, $1.58; for 1942, $1.66; and for 1941, $1.75. Due to the six-month time requirement, persons who wish to vote in the general election for City Council on June 13, must have paid taxes on or before December 12.

The minimum residence requirement provides that the voter must have lived in the State one year, the city six months and the ward 30 days before June 13 for the local election, and before November 6 for the State and presidential elections.

Petitt has announced that the city registration requirement may be filled until May 12 as the books will be closed from May 13 for the month before the general city election on June 13, when they will be opened again for a period of approximately five months until 30 days before the November general elections.

The number of qualified voters for the June 13 election listed by wards is as follows: First, 1106; Second, 992; Third, 1313; Fourth, 1557; Fifth, 2358, and Sixth, 3347.

3000 Drivers Lack Tags

Pointing out that approximately 3000 Alexandria automobile owners have failed to obtain city license tags, officials at the office of the commissioner of revenue, Charles H. Callahan, said last night that a systematic check of tax records is being made to determine which owners have not met the requirement.

Frederick N. Baker, inspector of licenses, of 1010 Duke st., and his assistant, Gordon L. Sanders, in their drive to enforce the ordinance are leaving notices on the windshields of parked cars which should have tags. The deadline for purchasing plates, which cost 10 cents per hundredweight, was April 15. Only 6202 tags out of an anticipated 9000 had been issued.

P-TA Urges Local Control Of Federal School Lunches

By the Associated Press

"Maximum local control" for a proposed permanent national school lunch program was urged before a Senate subcommittee yesterday by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Eunice H. Leonard, Columbia, S. C., vice president and chairman of the organization's school lunch project, indorsed the Smith-Ellender bill—one of several proposals to write Federal school lunch financial aid into a permanent statute.

Such Federal aid has been extended in the past under various emergency programs and is scheduled to expire next month in the absence of further authorization.

"We want the local school people to handle the lunch plan," Mrs. Leonard said, "with provision for nutritional education as well as actual school feeding. There should be maximum local control."

The bill she indorsed, sponsored by Senators Smith (D., S. C.) and Ellender (D., La.), would provide 50 million dollars annually, to be dsitributed to the States by the U. S. Commissioner of Education.

Joseph Meegan, executive secretary of the Back of the Yards Neighborhood Council, functioning in a Chicago industrial area, urged that Federal aid be administered by the Department of Agriculture, which has handled the emergency programs. He expressed concern for the program in parochial schools "if any great change is made."

Mrs. Grace Gosselin, representing the United Neighborhood Houses of New York, Inc., a federation of 42 settlements, the Public Education Association, the Children's Welfare Association and the National Association of Settlements, told the committee that these organizations "as a group" favored the bill by Senator Russell (D., Ga.), which would continue the lunch aid plan in the Department of Agriculture.

Four City Hog Raisers Fined in Frederick

Frederick, Md., May 4 (Spl.).—This city's ordinance outlawing hog pens within the municipal limits was put to its first test last night and four defendants were given a nominal fine of $1 each and ordered to dispose of the swine. The defendants, Stanley Michael, Frank Tracey, Raymond I. Smith and Stanley Michael, claimed their hogs were no less sanitary than the "city dump." Magistrate Alton Y. Bennett admitted that the municipal refuse depot "is no bargain" but it is not in violation of the law and hog pens are.

Rep. Smith Unopposed for Nomination

Representative Howard Worth Smith, sr. (D., Va.), will be declared the Democratic nominee without opposition in the November election, it was announced by Gardner L. Boothe of Alexandria, chairman of the Eighth Congressional District Democratic Committee.

Boothe said that no candidate had filed by the deadline midnight Tuesday to run against Smith, making it unnecessary to hold a primary in August. The deadline had been advanced a month to meet provisions of the soldier vote law requiring candidates to file 90 days before a primary election instead of 60 days as before.

Smith lives in Alexandria at 304 West Walnut st. and is president of the Alexandria National Bank.

Up until the deadline for filing, it was believed in some circles that a labor candidate might be named to oppose Smith in August.

"Impressive... Never flags in narrative interest."—N. Y. Times Book Review

Peter Domanig:
MORNING IN VIENNA

"A solid, workmanlike structure that stands four square and commands respect. It is the story of a boy in a great city as filled with tumultuous life as some of the novels of Dickens... as precise and elaborate a study of a social milieu as the novels of Theodore Dreiser, although it is much more deftly and fluently written. The slow even flow of his narrative builds up to a huge panorama. It portrays an immense amount of Viennese life. There are dozens of characters in this book, all of them sharply, soundly drawn. A huge, impressive first novel."

Haight Sees Derby as Arcaro-Jones Duel

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, May 4.—The odds board on Derby Day at Louisville will probably show Stir Up as the favorite at no better than 7 to 5, and certainly he does stand out as the best risk in the field, but they still have to run around the track. That's what the horsemen always say when they want to introduce a note of caution.

POVICH

Stir Up certainly rates the favoritism he now holds. He galloped off with the Flamingo, Florida's biggest 3-year-old stake, and he romped home with his end of the Wood Memorial a couple of weeks ago. There's nothing else in the field that, on form, rates with him. It may, in fact, have the unwanted distinction of being the worst Derby field in recent years.

Count Fleet justified his pre-race favoritism year by winning the Derby, but for every favorite who succeeded in the run for the roses, there is at least one other who finished up the track. A few years ago, Bimelech was supposed to win the Derby easily. It was won easily, but not by Bimelech. Gallahadion, a colt he had beaten in a Derby trial the same week, finished on top.

Whenever a horse race narrows down to the basis of the rest of the field against one standout, we are always reminded of the amazing story told by our friend Humphrey Finney, editor of The Maryland Horse. Mr. Finney, perhaps the Nation's greatest authority on blood lines, always like to deflate the idea that a horse cannot lose a race.

"I don't know how many ways there are to lose a race," said Finney, but they are countless. A favorite can stumble, he can fall, he can lose his rider, run to the outside, sulk, be the victim of a bad ride, break a stirrup or saddle straps, be left at the post, get caught in a jam, hit the fence or have romance on his mind instead of racing.

"There's a case on record in England, in a big race, in which none of these things happened to the favorite, yet he lost. He was leading by several lengths in the run for the finish, and from there on it seemed just a gallop for him, but he didn't win. A few yards from the finish, he was struck by lightning and killed!"

Stir Up is by Stimulus, which could mean that he wasn't bred for the Derby distance, and that theory alone would be a ready excuse if something came from behind to nip the Whitney colt. However, Stir Up appeared in no distress at the finish of the Wood Memorial and indicated that he was still full of run.

Broad Grin, which had been getting some backing, is now apparently out of the Derby since being headed by Mrs. George Poulson's Broadcloth the other day. Stir Up's chief contention may come from the pair that finished one-two in the Chesapeake Handicap last Saturday, Gramps Image and Pensive. There will be moderate backing also for Skytracer and Challenge Me.

The paradox may be that although this year's Derby field does not rate in caliber with former Derby entry lists, the 1944 Derby will be the richest in history. With 18 starters now probable, it may attain a value of $87,700, of which $66,200 would go to the winner if all 18 starting fees are paid.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro has a double incentive to make the ride of his life on Stir Up. Not only will he be riding for the traditional 10 per cent of the winner's purse, but he will be striving to equal the record of three Derby winners by a jockey. He'll be shooting at the mark now held by Earl Sande, and the colored star of the last century, Isaac Murphy.

Arcaro's presence on Stir Up will keep the odds on the favorite down inasmuch as the Italian lad is conceded to be the finest rider now on the tracks. Arcaro would be striving for a new and exclusive record of four Derby winners by a single jockey if he had not misjudged matters a bit two years ago. That's when he had his choice of riding either of the Greentree pair, Devil Diver or Shut Out. He chose Devil Diver as the colt most likely to succeed and finished far up the track with him while Shut Out went on to win.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Chicago, May 4.—The Chicago Cubs are ooking for their twenty-second manager since they opened shop in 1876. The twentieth, Jimmy Wilson, was fired Monday by Bristling little General Manager Jimmy Gallagher. The twenty-first is an old guy named Roy "Hard Rock" Johnson, former coach and now manager pro tem of the team that—at this writing—has a 9-game losing streak.

CONSIDINE

The search for the twenty-second manager may possibly bring Bill Terry back to baseball. Memphis' gift to the Baseball Writers Association was overcome with coyness yesterday when asked if he was interested in taking the job.

"Just let them ask me!" Wilyum said. I am not too sure about the exclamation at the end, and and if Bill didn't have it there he can again cry "misquote." Anyway, he seems interested. He retired from baseball some months ago with a bleak wave to the game's "cheapness" and went into the cotton business. Maybe he doesn't cotton to his new post or vice versa.

Others in line for the job are Stan Hack, Bill Jurges, Muddy Ruel, Bill Sweeney, who manages the Cubs' Los Angeles farm; Billy Meyer of Newark; Kiki Cuyler, Atlanta; Charlie Grimm, former Cub manager, who now pilots the Cubs' Milwaukee farm; Larry Gilbert, who handles the club's Nashville property, and a few others.

Hack Wilson, last detected tending bar in Brooklyn, has applied for the post. "I wouldn't be afraid to take it," Hack wired here. He's got something there. It does take a braveman to manage the Cubs, one of those teams wherein a certain front-office daffinesse carries on like a heritage. The Cubs always chose to fire a manager instead of a ball player.

We think Dizzy Dean would make a good manager for any team that has Lou Novikoff on the roster, an owner who boycotts the games and a general manager who got his job when the harried owner said—after reading Sports Writer Gallagher's blast at the team in the Chicago Herald-American—"Okay, let's see you do better."

Dean might be reluctant to leave his baseball broadcasting job in St. Louis. He's making more money now than he made when he was a 31-game winner with the Cards, and he's getting paid for something which he gave away for years: his gift of gab. But the Cubs could make good use of his color. So could baseball in general. The industry has a chronic stupidity which prompts it to leave men like Ruth, Cobb, Hornsby and Dean out of the game.

If "Hard Rock Johnson" rouses the last-place Cubs into a winning streak, he might wind up with the job on a permanent basis—the word permanent being used advisedly, of course. At the moment he's only a stop gap, while Gallagher's mustache twitches nervously and the job of ferreting out a winning-type of manager begins.

It's hard to get irate over baseball these days, but the act of firing Wilson because the ball players the firm provided for him this year are lousy, reminded us again how ruthless the game can be to loyal

The tribe tallied in the first by bunching three of its nine hits.

Wally Moses was credited with two stolen bases.

Browns' Sundra To Report to Army

St. Louis, May 4 (AP).—Pitcher Steve Sundra, who has won two games for the St. Louis Browns, will report for military service next Tuesday and to offset his departure the Browns today signed Denny Galehouse as a part-time player.

Galehouse, employed in a rubber factory in Akron, Ohio, will join the team each weekend to be available for a Sunday pitching assignment. He had an 11-11 record last season with the Browns. Sundra lost 15 and lost 11 in 1943.

Depaul Retains Meyer As Athletic Director

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Depaul Universtiy is retaining Ray Meyer as athletic director and basketball coach for another three years.

In the two years under Meyer, Depaul's cage teams have won 40 games and lost 8. The Demons were Eastern division runner-up in the NCAA tourney in 1943 and last season lost to St. John's of Brooklyn in the finals of the New York Invitational Tourney.

Virginian Is Pilot Of Ft. Sheridan Nine

Fort Sheridan, Ill., May 4 (AP).—Fort Sheridan's baseball team has a player-manager, Lieut. John Phipps, a former first baseman in the St. Louis Cardinals system. Phipps, whose home is in Galax, Va., has several former minor league and college players on the squad. The Soldiers have arranged a 37-game schedule and will meet one major league team, the Chicago White Sox.

Browns Take 2-0 Victory Over Tigers

St. Louis, May 4 (AP).—Nelson Potter limited Detroit's Tigers to five singles, only two of them in the same inning, as the St. Louis Browns held their top perch in the American League with a 2-to-0 shut out today.

It was the Browns' twelfth victory in 15 starts and Potter's third against one loss.

Both runs were driven in by George McQuinn. Ellis Clary scored in the third inning after McQuinn's fly to Eddie Mayo in short right. The first baseman's fifth-inning double, the only extra base blow of the game, brought Myron Hayworth home from second.

After one out in the fifth, consecutive safeties by Rufus Gentry and Joe Hoover gave the Tigers a chance. But Potter forced Mayo to ground to McQuinn and Vern Stephens threw out Roger Cramer.

A foul tip off the bat of Don Ross injured Hayworth's throwing hand in the fourth and he retired for Frank Mancuso at the start of the sixth.

Dodger Shortstop Sent to Montreal

Brooklyn, May 4 (AP).—Gene Mauch, boomed much of the spring training season as the regular 1944 shortstop of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was optioned to the Montreal Royals of the International League today.

Along with Mauch went Dick Weaver and Al Zachary, right-handed pitchers, while Infielder Clancy Smyres was sent to Newport News of the Piedmont League. All were optioned, subject to 24-hour recall notices.

The Dodgers also signed Ed Basinski, 21-year-old Buffalo shortstop who never has played pro basewall, and announced that Cal MacLish, 18-year-old Oklahoma City school-boy pitcher, was rejoining the slub. MacLish trained with the Dodgers at Bear Mountain, N. Y., but left before the season opened.

St. Louis, May 4 (AP).—Outfielder Johnny Hopp of the St. Louis Cardinals was rejected for military service at Jefferson Barracks today after medical officers examined X-rays taken Tuesday during his visit to the induction center. The reason for the rejection was not announced but Hopp is reported to have trouble with his back.

Ace Jockey And Trainer Match Wits

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—I'm just a green boy from Pimlico, but it hasn't taken me long to discover there's a feeling hereabouts that the seventieth running of the Kentucky Derby on Saturday will be a battle between two men instead of two horses. The local underground, at least the turf portion of it, is predicting that it is Eddie Arcaro against Ben Jones.

Arcaro, of course, is the present Mr. Money Bags of the saddle and he will be astride Greentree Stable's Stir Up, the current favorite for the Churchill Downs classic. Jones, acknowledged the best trainer in the country, will saddle Calumet Farm's Pensive.

Everything was once peaches and cream between Arcaro and Jones. That was at a time when they were both on the same team—the Calumet side. Arcaro has ridden two Derby winners. Jones has saddled two Derby winners. But neither Arcaro or Jones has been successful here in the Blue Grass without the other.

Rivalry Boiling

In 1938, Jones brought Lawrin up from Florida campaigning to hang defeat on Dauber and Can't Wait, and Arcaro it was who supplied the saddle punch of this memorable victory. In 1941, Jones sent Whirlaway into the Derby action and we all know that Mr. Longtail was the goods. Again it was cool, collected Arcaro who was in the pilot house.

Arcaro and Jones came to a parting of the ways. They are still friendly, but the boiling hot rivalry between Greentree and Calumet, a feature of 1943 campaigning all over the country, has carried into this year.

Now Arcaro by trade si a jockey, but his training judgment has come to be respected, particularly around Mrs. Payne Whitney's barn. Eddie wasn't so hot about Stir Up as a Derby hope before the Flamingo Stakes in Florida, and an accessory before the fact was that he had in mind that Ben Jones had four Kentucky candidates.

Arcaro Sold on Stir Up

But in the Flamingo, Stir Up was a winner, and it was largely due to Arcaro's riding that the Stimulus gelding got home in front. It is said that Stir Up was shipped to the Derby on Arcaro's say.

"This is the most improved horse in the country today," Arcaro told Maj. Louis Beard, major domo of the Whitney racing interests. "He can win the Derby so let's get him i nthe race."

Beard accepted Arcaro's judgment and sent the colt here under Trainer John Caver's charge. Now Arcaro must prove his judgment was right and he will be prepared to ride the race of his life to prove it.

Jones, on the other hand, let us Maryland fellows believe that he wasn't going to ship Pensive here. He said repeatedly that something would have to develop before he would ship. Shortly after the Chesapeage, in which Pensive was second, to Gramps Image, Jones called in the railroad express agent and Pensive was Derby bound.

Starting Field Falls to 17

Pensive was far from disgraced in taking second money at Pimlico last Saturday. For a horse with a bar plate holding a hoof together, he put up a game battle. Jones evidently saw enough to change his mind. The Calumet trainer is a dangerous man with a horse when big money is at stak. So is Arcaro.

Kentuckians say it will be Arcaro's riding vs. Jones' conditioning come Saturday. We shall see what we shall see.

The age-old newspaper game of trying to select the horses who will start goes on briskly. At this time, the knights of the typewriter have whittled it down to 17 starters. I'm going to let the wire service boys run them down.

Some of the opposition for Stir Up and Pensive will come from Challenge Me, a sprinted with not too much courage; Gramps Image, a little horse with a big heart; Sgytracer, which the boys say should have downed Stir Up in the Flamingo; Broadcloth, game little black flier from California; Bell Buzzer, a slower starter with stretch kick; Shut Up, a faster worker than any Derby hope; Diavolaw, possessed of burning speed; Autocrat, third to Stir Up in the Wood Memorial and Gay Bit, third in the Chesapeake.

But right now, the Kentuckians maintain, its Arcaro vs. Jones.

Haefner to Pitch

Nats, With Power on Upbeat, Open Series With A's Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 4.—Mickey Haefner, the Nats' ingrown left-hander, will attempt to insoribe his first victory of the 1944 season tomorrow and he'd like a bit better break in his luck.

Haefner goes against the Athletics in the start of a four-game series and the fact that he is still trying for his initial victory isn't all his fault. The Nats proved little help to him in his first start. He did give up two runs to the Yankees in the first inning, but thereafter he settled down to pitch runless bal lfor the rest of the afternoon. It was no dice, however, with the Nats getting only one run off Ernie Bonham.

There's a suspicion that Haefer will be supported by better hitting henceforth. The Nats struck a new high for power in the recent Boston series, scoring 11 runs in one game and ten in another, and give evidence that they may yet be a hitting club.

Torres, Myatt, Ferrell Hitting

Stan Spence, who had been a liability up to the Boston series, has started banging the ball, and in Fenway Park he was hitting for extra bases to all fields, including the authorship of a tremendous home run into the distant right field staids.

The brunt of the Nats' hitting, though, has been done since the start of the season by the three men who weren't supposed to take the lead. They are George Myatt, Rick Ferrell and Gil Torres, the only fellows who haven't given Manager Ossie Bluege cause for complaint.

Ferrell was expected to hit, because down through the years he has been a dangerous guy with the bat, but the reformation of Myatt is extremely gratifying to Bluege. Never regarded as much of a sticker, Myatt is leading the club in batting with a mark over .400, and all of his hits have been solid straight away blows, except when he was bunting.

Torres Mark Surprise

The most delightful surprise for Bduege, though, is Torres who is proving daily that he belongs in big league company after a half dozen years of starring in the minors. Torres has been assaulting al lkinds of pitching and getting a piece of the ball on every appearance. Right now he is the best hit-and-run man on the club.

I nfact, Torres and Ferrell are about the only Nats who can put on the hit and rnu play with any consistency of success.

Alexax Carrasquel is scheduled to make his first start of the season during the series here. . . . The Nats will probably draw Buck Newsom as one of the A's pitchers in the Sunday doubleheader. . . . Newsom hasn't lasted in his two starts since recording his shutout against the Red Sox. . . . George Case will return to the Nats' line-up after two days of enforced idleness in Boston following a badly scraped right knee when he tripped at second base. . . . Big Roberto Ortiz is beginning to justify his spot in fourth place, but there is no noticeable improvement in the Cuban's outfielding. Early Wynn is expected to rejoin the team here and start a game pending his call to service by the Navy. . . . Dutch Leonard's various ailments are a set-back to the pitching staff. . . . Leonard pitched only five innings in his first start when he retired with a lame back, and he stayed around only two innings at Boston. . . . Bluege withdrew him when Catcher Rick Ferrell noticed that Leonard was flinching on each pitch, and Leonard admitted there was painful soreness in his shoulder.

Bill McKechnie has seen longer service than any manager with the Cincinnati Reds. He's now in his seventh season.

Braves' Ryan Belts 2 Homers To Beat N. Y.

New York, May 4 (AP).—The Boston Braves whipped the New York Giants 8-4 to hand the New Yorkers their fourth consecutive defeat. Connie Ryan, former Giant led the Boston attack with two singles and a home run, driving in four runs.

Ir a Hutchinson, making his first start for the Braves received credit for the victory, although he had to be relieved by Charlie Barrett in the sixth.

Ewald Pyle, Giant lefthander lasted only three and one-third innings, yielding six hits and five runs. Harry Feldman, who replaced Pyle, was rapped for three hits and two runs in the fifth, giving way for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

Frank Seward gave up the last Boston run in the eighth.

Ernie Lombardi drove in three of the Giants' runs with a fielder's choice and a double.

Bitsy Grant Isn't Serving in Tennis Now—He's Doing KP

By Olen Clements

United States Fifth Airforce Headquarters, New Guinea (Delayed) (AP).—The gravy ladle comes over in a beautiful forehand drive and the gravy hits the mess kit—her-plop.

The little guy behind the ladle is finaked by a big guy who has lost much weight in the tropic heat and who shares with the little guy an intense dislike for KP duty.

"I used to eat at the captain's table and once I beat the King of Sweden at tennis."

The big guy groans:

"When this war is over, I'm goin gto stand up on the floor of Congress and make a speech about KP duty and I'm not going to pull my punches."

The little guny is Pvt. Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, Ga., one of the world's best tennis players a few years back.

The big guy is Pvt. Harry Glass, jr., of Grand Rapids, Mich., former member of the Michigan Legislature and leader of the Young Democrats.

They have the same ambition: To become corporals. In this camp, corporals are exempt from KP duty.

When Grant is not on KP duty, he works in the special serviced office and often plays tennis with the colonel.

Glass, who's known as "The Senator," works in the public relations office. Sometimes, when things are dull around there, Maj. Ted Wagner, on leave from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, looks at the jeep and tells Staff Sergt. Robert Fitzsimmons, Sunnyside, Long Island, N. Y., that it ough to be cleaned.

The sergeant tells Corpl. Jack Seligman of New York, N. Y., to clean it up, and the corporal turns the job over to "The Senator." Both Fitzsimmons and Seligman say Glass' idea to clean a jeep is to wipe the windshield.

Alabama Captures $6150 Ral Parr Stakes

Don Chance Is Second, A Nose Away

Pimlico, Md., May 4.—Alabama, a son of the imported Mahomud and Galla Belle, gave F. W. Hooper, a Florida newcomer to the racing game, his first stake victory here thsi afternoon as he sped to a nose triumph in the sixth running of the Ral Parr Stakes.

Alabama covered the 4½ furlongs in 54 3-5 seconds to equal his own mark set last Saturday as the best at the meeting. W. A. Coleman's Don Chance was second, a length before Mrs. W. W. Adams' Flying Bridge in the field of five, 2-year-olds.

Victory for the Hooper representative was popular with 13,122 fans gathered to watch the sport over a fast track and with ideal spring weather prevailing. He was $3.70 favorite and was ridden by Nick Jemas.

In Stretch Duel

The son of Mahmoud proved himself a game colt by his triumph for after taking the lead at the break, he was collared by Don Chance entering the stretch, bumped a couple of times in a bitter stretch duel and then came on in the final stages to outgame his rival.

Flying Bridge, winner of the Aberdeen Stakes last week, was tardily away from the gate and then made up some ground in the stretch but failed to offer a real threat.

Alabama, scoring his second victory in four starts, earned $6150 and Hooper was on hand to receive the trophy from Mrs. Ral Parr, widow of the former Maryland Jockey Club director and sportsman for whom the race is named.

Mad Policy Wins

Mad Policy, 10-year-old veteran of the steeplechase game, owned by Miss Peggy Squiers made all his own pace to score by a length in the 2 mile jumping event under Warren Leonard, but he had to survive a foul claim. Colonel Broks, riding Lieut. Stephen C. Clark's Fay Cottage, the second horse to finish maintained Mad Policy cut in front of him at the final fence but the claim was diallowed. Pico Blanco II, owned by William Post was a distant third. Mad Policy paid $8.40 and the time was 3:58 4-5.

After the seventh race a small fire in the clubhouse probably caused by a discarded cigarette tossed among papers was quickly extinguished without material damage.

Peru's 'Fabulous Figure,' Pedro Beltran, May Be Appointed New Ambassador

LATEST RUSTLINGS of the Capital grapevine indicate that Pedro Beltran, recent visitor to Washington, will be the next Peruvian Ambassador here.

Among the more fabulous figures of South America, Senor Beltran owns one ofthe largest cotton plantations in his homeland and is a former director of La Prenza, Peru's outstanding newspaper. At one stage in his career, he was connected with the cotton exchange in Liverpool, England, and at another, he was Peruvian delegate to an international trade agreement conference.

I talked with Senor Beltran one day last week at a small party given by Mrs. Walter Anderson. He was in Washington, he said, "on business." He implied that business had no connection with the rumor that he might be named successor to the late dean of the diplomatic corps, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who served his country as envoy here so many years.

Diplomatically, and with a suave, smile, Senor Beltran declined to affirm the rumor. But "I do like Washington," he said. "I have a number of friends here. However, I'm returning soon to Lima."

He is there now, but rumors floating northward have it that his stay will be short and that he will be back in Washington within a couple of months. If that is true, it should be exceptionally good news for Washington hostesses. Senator Beltran should fill the bill as the ideal dinner guest. He's personable and attractive, a fascinating conversationalist, and a bachelor . . . in his late forties. If he's socially inclined, he'll be rushed off his feet from the moment he arrives.

A CAVE-DWELLING Washingtonian, longing for the lost era when Everybody here knew Everybody else, decided to give a late afternoon party for old friends the other afternoon.

She firmly resisted the temptation to invite anybody she had met here since war began; carried out her plan to ask only acquaintances who have called the Capital "home" for many years. When the party got under way, each guest discovered to his delight that he knew all the others. It was a gala get-together.

"I was the only newcomer present," quipped Mrs. William P. MacCracken. "I've lived here only 18 years!"

TOUR AND TROUBLE: "Well, I just hope I can get it that clean again," sighed Mrs. Thurman Arnold the other afternoon. She was talking of her Alexandria home, which is among those to be shown on the benefit tour tomorrow. Seems she got her dates confused; thought the tour was scheduled for a week ago, and spent several days getting the place polished up in time.

If Mrs. Hugo Black hadn't happened in shortly before Mrs. Arnold thought the tour was to begin, she might have stayed home all last Saturday, waiting for visitors who never arrived.

"The tour's next Saturday," said Mrs. Black a week ago.

"Next Saturday," cried Mrs. Arnold. "All that trouble for nothing! I'll never get the place this clean again!"

BAHA'I WEDDING BELLS: From New York comes word that a Baha'i nuptial ceremony will unite Evelyn Kluge of Washington and Dr. Kahraiti R. Samras on May 9. The event will take place at the East Sixty-fifth st. home of Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, widow of the Lieutenant Governor of New York under Charles Evans Hughes.

Since Mrs. Chanler became a Baha'ian some years ago, her home has been a center of activities for the religion and of a group called the Caravan of East and West, which she heads. Miss Kluge is also a Baha'ian, as are several members of her family. Her grandfather embraced the faith in 1896 when the World Parliament of Religion met at the Chicago World's Fair.

Officiating at the ceremony on May 9 will be Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, a director of the Caravan group. He collaborated with Mrs. Chanler and Max Brand in writing "The Gate," an opera which will have its world premiere May 23 at the Metropolitan Opera House. Funds will go to the needy children of India.

NO CAKE EATER is chubby Alfred Nations, because cake is not for a one year older. It was a big moment when his birthday cake was set before him with a burning candle—although he had only a taste of the icing

'Alf.' Celebrates Birthday In Middle of Baby Week

Alfred Leroy Nations, one of the 3,200,000 babies born in 1943, has come through his first year in flying colors. If food rationing worked a hardship on anyone, it was not this sturdy American who celebrated his first birthday, May 2—right in the middle of the week dedicated to the Nation's babies.

Martha Ellyn

"Alf," as he is called by his family, has no pet food peeves. He does have one special preference—bananas. In fact, his fondness for them, sends his paternal grandfather on many an early trek to the grocery from their Silver Spring home in search of this not too plentiful fruit.

Mrs. Nations doesn't find it much more difficult to feed this baby than it was to find good nourishment for her son "Mac" six years ago when he was a baby. Even last year's orange shortage wasn't a problem. "Alf is slightly allergic to orange juice," she explained, "so I gave him tomato juice."

No Point Problem

Neither was the getting of processed baby foods a point problem. "I use approximately 19 points a week for canned products for "Alf," she said. Eight cans of nonirridated evaporated milk at 1 red point each; four cans strained fruits at one blue point each; seven strained vegetables at one point each.

"Both of our babies have been given commercially canned strained fruits and vegetables. I consider these a great boon for all mothers. Now that marketing is a problem, this type of baby food saves not only my marketing time, but I don't have to wash, cut, scrape, peel, cook and strain the food for Alf. We mothers have many time-consuming tasks, so there's no need to do any unnecessary work."

Those who have the idea that well babies don't require plenty of food should check over the many directions given by authorities on baby feeding. It is amazing how much food any healthy baby requires. The normal baby needs twice as much fuel per pound as an adult, that is, 44 calories per pound per day for the baby as against 20 calories per pound for dad.

Sturdy chest, strong limbs, straight back, firm flesh and sound tissue—all the characteristics that show a baby to be in fine fettle, are possessed by the 24-pound son of the Nations. The following schedule is responsible for his marvelous progress.

Present Schedule

7 a. m.—Bottle of formula consisting of evaporated milk, corn sirup and boiled water. Graham cracker or Zwieback.

11 a. m.—Cereal (variety of dry cereals mixed with formula to proper consistency). About 1/3 to ½ fresh banana.

3 p. m.—Yolk of hard-cooked egg, vegetable, crisp bacon, formula.

7 p. m.—Cereal, fruit, formula, graham cracker or Zwieback.

Between regular feedings receives small amounts of orange or tomato juice. The strained vegetables used include peas, carrots, string beans, beets, etc.

The fruits used consist principally of strained prunes and applesauce, plus banana and orange juice.

All foods and schedule details are reviewed periodically with the baby's pediatrician and subject to change or gradual revision.

Very soon Alf will go on a new feeding schedule consisting of cereal, fruit and a richer milk formula for his breakfast; at noon he will get a vegetable, baked potato and formula. At 6 o'clock he will be given cereal, fruit and formula.

War Shortages Accent Need For Workroom

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

A well-run household needs a repair department and such a center can be made with the future as well as the present in mind—with the extra sewing demands of the present serving as an incentive to do an efficient organizing job.

The hardest thing about mending is getting at it—that's because you usually have to dig up all your paraphernalia before you can settle down to the job. Half those rips and tears might be fixed as they are noticed if the sewing machine were open and ready. And many more buttons would be sewed on if a button box, needles and thread were in easy reach.

Collect Necessities for Work

So, if possible, keep your sewing machine in a room where you can leave it open and ready for spur-of-the-moment jobs. Have a chest or cabinet with thread, thimbles, needles, buttons, tape, straps and supporters in wide assortment and in orderly arrangement.

Pins are absolutely essential; the easiest way to keep them is in pin cushions. Have a chest, basket or closet for keeping your accumulated mending. Other necessaries will include tape line or yardstick, sharp scissors and a skirt marker. A big table for cutting and spreading things out is a "must," but you can use the dining room table.

Best to Have Room for Repairs

You ought to have your ironing board in reach of your sewing center. And that's another piece of equipment that needs to be kept out and ready for unexpected use.

In ordinary times we'd recommend that you tack on an extra room for repairs. But times being as they are, we'll settle for the guest room when it's not on duty. If you have a closet, the whole works can probably be whisked in there when company descends. If that won't work, just put it all behind something glamorous in the way of a screen. Other possible spots for a sewing room include sun parlor or game room. If there's no such extra room available, then use a corner and cover up with a screen.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

When Nurses' Aides Carry On

When young nurses' aides rush home goggle-eyed from their first day at a hospital to tell their families what they have learned about "life" in a few hours, their conservative mothers shudder inwardly. Yet the mothers soon rally—and so do the aides—and thereafter, as is the wont of American women, they make it a gay and "terribly funny" adventure.

This all seems very modern. Yet at least one nurses' aide of the Civil War—volunteer nurse, as she was called then—met the grim, bloody realities of her job with the same dauntless gayety as the nurses' aides of today. She was one of the immortal "Little Women," or as she was known in the Union Hotel Hospital in old Georgetown, Louisa May Alcott.

"Washing a man" was one of the big hurdles the 16-year-old nurses' aide took in Willie Snow Ethridge's recently published, "This Little Pig Stayed Home," an hilarious and at times gently moving account of trials on the home front. And "scrubbing the lords of creation" after a battle was the first big test Louisa May Alcott met in her Georgetown hospital experience. Her labors and those of the thousands of other American women who stepped out of their homes to stanch the blood and ease the suffering of the Civil War wounded and dying is told vividly by Marjorie Barstow Greenbie in her book "Lincoln's Daughters of Mercy," published today.

Washing a Man Her First Hurdle

"It's all part of the nursing procedure," Mrs. Ethridge's young daughter explained as she told of washing a man in a hospital ward who was "all beaten up." "This man was a scream" she continued. "He talked all the time I was bathing him, and he told me one of his sons had beaten him up."

When Miss Alcott was ordered to wash some wounded men she gasped. "To scrub some dozen lords of creation was really—really—" she related afterward. However, as Mrs. Greenbie reports it from Miss Alcott's own amusing record, "she drowned her scruples in the washtub, clutched a towel and a large hunk of yellow soap and tackled the first specimen, a withered old Irishman with a wound in his head."

"He was so overpowered," here the quotation is from Miss Alcott "that he did nothing but roll up his eyes and bless me . . . We laughed together, and when I knelt down to take off his shoes, he wouldn't hear of my touching 'them dirty craters.' 'Bedad' he said, 'it's hard to tell which is the dirtiest—the fut or the shoes.'"

Mrs. Ethridge and Mrs. Greenbie, both former resident of Washington, have caught in widely dissimilar books the dauntless and resourceful spirit women bring to the vicissitudes of war. But few American women today, as they pursue their more or less orderly war activities, realize how much they owe to the Ladies Aid Societies of 1860. Nor does the Nation realize how much it owes these organizations, which became the national helpmate of the Union Armies.

Women Took Over In Civil War

How these women, by determinations, courage, tact, and eternal feminine wisdom, moved in on the men leaders who were badly bumbling the care of the war sick and wounded, and brought cleanliness, order, and scientific care into the dirty and chaotic hospitals makes a dramatic and heroic tale, as told by Mrs. Greenbie.

How different the picture of women in war service then from what it is now with trimly uniformed Wacs and Waves filling the streets and white garbed, efficient nurses running the hospitals! The situation then in Washington was shocking. Wounded and sick men had overflowed the few hospitals, and were piled into churches, office buildings and shacks along the river. Smallpox cases filled the one 6-room military hospital on First st. Add to this, suffocating heat, the stench from improper sanitation and a standard diet of beans, fat salt pork and coffee for all soldiers sick or well.

Into this confused tragic scene came the women volunteers in time at least to mitigate a little of the suffering of the wounded, sick and dying men who had made the long retreat after the first battle of Bull Run. Gradually, as Mrs. Greenbie relates, the first nurses' aides brought about more merciful and sanitary care of all the fighting men, and laid the foundation of the great organized work of today, which in the words of Clara Barton, enables American women to be "working instead of weeping, nursing instead of waiting."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Father Finds Pleasure in Bestowing Gifts Upon His Married Daughter, An Only Child; Her Husband Strongly Opposes the Practice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is a young wife weak to continue accepting gifts from her father, after a year or so of marriage? Do you think when a father gives his married daughter nice gifts, such as a check, a dress, a purse, hat, etc., it discourages her from practicing thrift? Do you think it encourages thrift in a wife, to be deprived of the little luxuries and niceties that every woman loves?

Since the father, an aging man, finds pleasure in bestowing gifts on his married daughter (an only child), should the husband humor age, so to speak, and let the gifts continue? Or should the husband's disapproval be allowed to prevail? This is the husband's strongest plea: "Some day, when these presents cease, my wife will simply have to do without. Therefore, she should learn to do without them now." The father's argument is: "As long as I live and am able to provide, I intend to see that my daughter has the little extras that make her happy. It gives me pleasure to give her these things."

Are these two men vying with each other for the girl's affection? The girl would be most happy if the growing enmity between her husband and her father were healed. We think of ourselves as intelligent, capable people, Miss Haworth. We go to school and college to learn how to live amicably in this world with other people. But the psychology courses in my case failed to teach me what I need to know. Can you help us?

OPHELIA.

Father Is Animated By Loving-Kindness

DEAR OPHELIA: I believe there was no thought of male rivalry in the father's mind, no obscure impulse to vie with her husband for the girl's affections, when he inaugurated his policy of treating her, after marriage, to a flow of small feminine luxuries that she could not have afforded, on her husband's income. The fact that the father is growing old, and that the girl is his only child, and that there is no mention of a mother in the picture, explains a lot, it seems to me.

Or look at it this way: From the time of the girl's birth until the day of her marriage, the father (we may assume) had paid all her expenses, with the possible exception of a few years when she may have held a job and been partially self-supporting. In any event, he was her main source of revenue; he was her meal ticket, until that obligation was transferred to her husband's shoulders,—leaving the father figuratively fingering, with mingled emotions, a steadily growing pile of idle dollars that used to be invested in his daughter's board-and-keep. What more natural, then, than that he would feel moved,—by the kindliest intentions,—to spend some of that surplus on lovingly-chosen, small, useful gifts for his daughter?

Husband's Objection Reflects Hurt Pride

AS A GENERAL rule, it is a sound principle of good partnership in marriage for a wife to conform her personal possessions and expenditures to her husband's income;—in other words, to adjust herself to a standard of living commensurate with his earning powers. However, that principle certainly is not violated by the wife's glad acceptance of occasional modest presents from a devoted parent;—most especially when the giver's motive is helpful and kind, which I believe is the case with your father.

Your husband's glowering resentment of your father's restrained benevolence, in sometimes giving you a hat, or dress, or purse, or check to spend as you please, probably stems from petty pride, galled by the very aptness of the gifts, which trickle in to meet a practical or esthetic need of yours, just as the need is becoming apparent; and that probably could not have been met on your husband's already overtaxed means. Your husband establishes his objection as picayune, when he argues that, "Some day, when these presents cease, you will have to do without; and therefore, you should do without them now."

No Civilized Sense In Man's Argument

ANY WAY you take it, his argument doesn't make civilized sense. It is a law of metaphysics that the time to be happy is NOW; since throughout all eternity, NOW is the whole of experience. As some poet has said, "Yesterday is but a Dream, and Tomorrow is only a Vision——." The time for being is NOW. How joyless the man, how hopeless his spirit, who preaches the arid doctrine of training for the worst! If your husband is trying to be realistic (so-called), it would be more to the point if he said: "Better take it while the getting is good. When this supply fails, you may be a long time without!"

In the face of your husband's selfish churl behavior, my sympathies are with you and your father. Your husband is poorer in spirit than he is in purse; and his lack of generosity of the heart is causing far more trouble, in this instance, than his lack of greenbacks to match your father's.

Musical Party Climaxes Idea Formed In London

It's a small world, especially if you speak the language of music.

That is what the guests of Air Commodore and Mrs. D. L. Blackford decided last night when they learned the background for the party which their hosts gave in honor of the Russian pianist, Anya Dorfman.

When Mrs. Blackford was in London four months ago, Miss Dorfman was creating a sensation in British music circles, winning acclaim on all sides. A singer and pianist herself, Mrs. Blackford attended several concerts, vowed she would meet the artist, but time was short and she returned to Washington without having made Miss Dorfman's acquaintance.

Occasion Demands Party

Then, Monday Miss Dorfman appeared in Washington. The Blackfords met her Tuesday after the Chamber Music Guild concert, at which the pianist was guest soloist. Delighted, they decided the occasion called for a party.

So last evening, at their attractive Georgetown house, they set the scene for a real musical soiree. They invited all their friends who know and enjoy music; present also were a group of convalescents from Walter Reed Medical Center.

Everyone, if he were so inclined, offered his own musical talents to the evening, which began at 9, and ended when the last note was sounded.

It was a gathering of many nationalities. Among those present were the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, the Yugoslavian Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch, the Ecuadorian Envoy, Capt. Eloy Alfaro; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas, the Spanish Military Attache and Senora G. de Canino, the Polish Assistant Military Attache and Countess Zamoyska and many others from diplomatic circles.

Mrs. Eaker There

Mrs. Ira E. Eaker, wife of Lieut. Gen. Eaker, head of all the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces, was present, along with Mrs. James H. Doolittle, wife of the flying Major General Doolittle.

Lieut. Lilman Engel, the composer, took part in the evening's entertainment, as did Sergt. Virgil Fox, the Army's famed organist. Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey T. Hellman and David Cohn, the author, were among those joining the group.

Miss Dorfman came with Mrs. Martin Vogel, at whose house she is staying this week. Sunday Washingtonians will have another chance to hear the artist when she presents a concert at the National Art Gallery, before returning to New York.

Purely Personal

The Charge d'Affaires of Peru and Senora de Garland will entertain at dinner this evening at their home, 5315 Connecticut ave., honoring the American Ambassador to Ecuador and Mrs. Rob Scotten.

Honoring Mrs. John Curtin, wife of the Prime Minister of Australia, Mrs. Barnet Nover will be hostess at luncheon at the Carlton Thursday.

The Norwegian Second Secretary and Mme. Bredo Stabell will be hosts tomorrow afternoon from 5:30 to 7:30 at their home, 5006 Tilden st.

In compliment to Ellis Briggs, American Ambassador to the Dominican Republic, Mrs. Leigh Wade will entertain Tuesday from 5:30 to 7:30.

Plans Set Up For Bankers' Bond Drive

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington bank staffs will be asked to canvass every bank customer during the Fifth War Loan Drive between June 12 and July 8, according to plans revealed yesterday by A. L. M. Wiggins, president of the American Bankers Association.

Mr. Wiggins in a formal release to local bankers said that although banks were experiencing their share of manpower difficulties, experience in previous loan drives and intensified efforts of bank staffs would supplement work of other groups in making the effort successful.

The goal of the Fifth War Loan nationally will be 16 billion dollars, of which six billion dollars is apportioned to come from sales to individuals and the remainder from sales to corporations and institutional investors, Mr. Wiggins announced.

Banks will be urged to fix goals for themselves on a dollar basis, and to set up a system of records so that efforts can be checked. One banker in each State will be designated to head up the bankers' part in the drive and work closely with his war finance committee, Mr. Wiggins said in reviewing plans for the War Loan Drive.

Md. Bankers to Meet

Postwar prospects, ration banking and the next war loan will be among subjects to be discussed at the forty-ninth annual convention of the Maryland Bankers Association in Baltimore May 25 and 26.

Certain-teed 'Rebels' Win Vote Delay

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—In a brief but stormy session. Certain-teed Products Corp. stockholders seeking to oust the present management succeeded today in adjourning the annual meeting to May 12 after expressing confidence they could produce a quorum.

Under an agreement with attorneys for the management, the faction headed by Rawson G. Lizars of Chicago must give notice 48 hours before the scheduled May 12 session if unable to produce a simple majority. In that event, the meeting would be held over until May 16, one day after a scheduled hearing on a legal move to force counting of all proxies and election of officers.

Basis for the dispute is the contention by the Lizars' group that the corporation pays too high salaries to its officers and that B. G. Dahlberg of Chicago, chairman of the board, cannot carry out his duties properly because he also is head of Celotex Corp., a rival company. Both manufacture roofing and other building materials. The management also was criticized for its policy for allowing excess manufacturing facilities to be used by the Celotex concern.

The management in turn charged the Lizars' group with misrepresentations in letters mailed to stockholders in the course of soliciting proxies, and on those grounds sought an injunction which last week was ruled out by Circuit Court Judge William L. Henderson.

Another Proxy Battle

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—C. T. O'Neal, president of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, today said in a letter to stockholders that proxies in favor of the present management were being received in "satisfactory numbers" for the annual stockholders' meeting in Chicago on May 12.

Management of the company is being challenged by V. V. Boatner, who has presented a directors' slate for election by the stockholders. Boatner is a director of the company. Both sides are waging a battle for proxies.

O'Neal's letter said Boatner erred "in stating that the board of directors refused to vote the declaration of a dividend (on the common stock) until Jesse Jones approved it. Jones is Secretary of Commerce and head of the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

"It was not within the province of Mr. Jones to approve the declaration of a dividend and he never did approve it, and the board voted to declare and pay it, in the face of Mr. Jones' recommendation to the contrary," O'Neal said.

Libby Proposes $7,500,000 Issue

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Libby, McNeill and Libby Co. announced today it had filed a registration statement covering $7,500,000 of serial debentures with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Philadelphia.

Proceeds of the financing, together with other funds of the company, will be used for redemption at 104 and accrued interest on or before July 1, 1944, of the outstanding first mortgage 15-year sinking fund 4 per cent bonds, due January 1, 1955, presently outstanding in the principal amount of $8,172,000.

The proposed offering will be made by a syndicate headed by Glore, Foran & Co., Chicago. Libby, McNeill & Libby is a food processing company.
